Hoeppel and Son Convicted of Plot To Sell Cadetship

California Congressman Sheds Tears as Jury Gives Verdict.

Both Face 2-Year Terms in Prison

StateCharged TheyTried to Get $1,000 From Baltimore Athlete.

Representative John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son, Charles, were convicted last night by a District Supreme Court jury of conspiring to sell a West Point appointment.

The jury reported to Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in a hushed courtroom at 11:55 p. m. after deliberating six hours and four minutes.

Tears fell from the eyes of Representative Hoeppel as the jury foreman intoned "guilty as charged as to both defendants."

Charles Hoeppel remained outwardly composed. Neither father nor son uttered a word.

The convicted—the first criminal case in which a Congressman has been involved here in many years—was a climax to several days of testimony by many witnesses and bickering between an impressive array of counsel on both sides.

James W. Ives, of Baltimore, former Olympic athlete, was not present when the Hoeppels were found guilty of attempting to sell the cadetship to him in May, 1934, for $1,000.

Few in Courtroom.

Although the courtroom was crowded throughout the trial, only a few spectators were present when the verdict was announced.

An earlier report that the jury would be locked up for the night without deciding the fate of the defendants contributed to the thinning out of the crowd.

On motion of Col. Edward Bailey, of defense counsel, father and son were permitted to remain at liberty under $500 bond each pending appeal. Justice O'Donoghue, at the request of Government counsel, ordered the Hoeppels to post new bond of $1,000 each today.

A maximum sentence of from four months to two years and a fine of $10,000 is possible for both father and son.

Prosecutor Cries "Liar."

There was a flurry in the courtroom during the closing arguments when Col. Bailey demanded a mistrial because David A. Pine, an assistant United States attorney, said of Representative Hoeppel:

"He is a perjurer of the first water and a monumental liar."

Justice O'Donoghue overruled the motion and a few minutes later charged the jury.

"A conspiracy," he told the jury, "is a mental thing—a state of mind where two or more people agree to do un unlawful act or a lawful act to be done in an unlawful manner."

Both defendants, O'Donoghue cautioned, "are presumed to be innocent until and unless they are proved to be guilty."

Pine, in his closing argument, insisted the prosecution produced evidence sufficient to prove the defendants guilty.

"The evidence in this case," he said, "will make a complete and perfect pattern of conspiracy. It's just like a small child's jigsaw puzzle."

Ansell Pleads for Pair.

Maj. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, chief of defense counsel, argued there had been no conspiracy.

"You can't find any reasonable way to find either Representative Hoeppel or his son guilty," he said.

Army officers under whom the senior Hoeppel served as an en-

Third Wounded, Attacker Kills Self; Dismissal in Row Blamed.

New York, Dec. 12.—Maddened by imagined injustices and his discharge from a mechanic's job at Columbia University medical center, Victor S. Koussow, 55, holder of Russian university degrees, today shot and killed two members of the faculty of Columbia College of Dental and Oral Surgery, wounded another and committed suicide.

Racing into the college building at the medical center on the upper west side, Koussow acted so quickly the three faculty members were shot before associates had time to act. He fired a bullet into his own head as Dr. Lewis Stowe rushed at him.

Koussow's victims were:

DR. PAUL WIBERG, 38, assistant professor of dentistry, killed instantly.

DR. ARTHUR T. ROWE, 51, associate dean of the dental college, wounded fatally.

DR. WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD, 38, assistant professor of dentistry, wounded in the side.

Koussow was discharged by Dr. Rowe this morning after a violent argument between Koussow and a fellow worker. According to university authorities, Koussow held a high position in Russia before coming here and was disgruntled with what he considered his menial tasks at the medical center.

He was an honor graduate in law from the University of Moscow and had studied three years in a medical school at Odessa.

Dr. Rowe was Koussow's first victim. The Russian entered the associate dean's office on the sixth floor of the medical building and shot him twice. As Dr. Rowe fell, mortally wounded, Koussow ran up two flights of stairs to a laboratory dark room, where he opened fire on Dr. Wiberg, killing him instantly, and wounded Dr. Crawford.

He then killed himself as Dr.

Plane Rushed for Hop On Ellsworth Search

Kansas City, Dec. 12 (AP).—Mechanics hastened work on a plane tonight as Pilot Dick Merrill awaited dawn for his take-off to search the Antarctic for Lincoln Ellsworth, explorer who disappeared November 23.

Merrill said he and William Klenke, jr., radio operator, planned to leave for Magallanes, Chile, where they hope to contact the Ellsworth supply ship. Their first stop will be Fort Worth, Tex.

Vacancy Wanted On Kenyon Street

There must be at least ten men looking for a vacant room or apartment near the 600 Block of Kenyon street northwest. Mrs. J. H. Brown, of 613 Kenyon street, had a vacancy the other day. A Post Classified Ad filled her two vacant rooms—but she had to disappoint about eight men who called. Here's the small inexpensive Post Classified Ad that brought the tenants:

U.S. Asks Pool Of All Attacks On Utility Act

Flood of Suits Swamps His Legal Staff, Says Attorney General.

Companies Give Consent if Granted a Voice in Selections.

By Robert C. Albright.

A last-ditch move by the Government to narrow constitutional tests of the utilities holding company act to one suit of its own choosing yesterday was argued before the District Supreme Court by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, and bitterly fought by the utilities.

Countering the unusual plea by the Government, representative utilities offered to pool the issues at stake in one court case, provided they had a say in the choosing. This was unacceptable to Cummings, who said it would be "futile" to negotiate to such an end.

After three hours of argument, Justice Jennings Bailey took under consideration the Government's suit, which may do much to define the bounds in which the Gargantuan legal battle over utility act validity will be fought out in the courts. There will be no decision for a week or ten days.

Cummings Fears Barrage.

Attorney General Cummings, whose lieutenant, Solicitor General Stanley Reed, collapsed while defending the Bankhead cotton control act in Supreme Court early this week, took the tack that it would be "cruelty" to his legal staff, and a physically impossible task, for the Government to combat everyone of the "barrage" of injunction suits that has been filed.

"Suits have rained upon us from every spot in the zenith," said the tall, flushed Attorney General, whose plea before Justice Bailey marked his first official appearance before a lower tribunal, although he defended gold law legality before the Supreme Court early this year.

"We are literally submerged by them. No just purpose has been served by anyone of them * * * I am willing to take on any gentleman, but I want to take them on one at a time. Even the pugilistic champion of the world would be unwilling to meet a whole ringful of opponents in one match."

Wants Suits Stayed.

He prosposed instead that seven injunction suits pending in the local court be stayed until a constitutional decision can be had on a suit the Government itself has brought in New York against the Electric Bond & Share Co., and 21 subsidiaries and affiliates.

Speaking for the North American Co. and the American Waterworks & Electric Co., Counsel John C. Higgins said his clients had few issues in common with questions at stake in the E. B. & S. case, that delay of their present action would cause "irreparable" injuries.

But, he volunteered, the utilities are willing to co-operate with the Government in an effort to join issues involved in two or three of the suits in one test case, in one court. He said Justice Bailey had no power to grant the Government a stay.

Frequently Higgins became caustic in his references to the Attorney General's contentions. To Cummings' statement that his staff was overworked, undermanned, and Havana, Dec. 12.—Jose A. Barnet, 71-year-old acting president, was elected provisional president of Cuba tonight by the cabinet and council of state, meeting jointly as an electoral college.

Barnet will take the oath of office at the presidential palace at noon tomorrow, when members of the Supreme Court will visit the palace in a body.

The new provisional president will serve until a constitutional president is elected January 10 and inaugurated May 20.

The Menocalist Party, whose demands forced the resignation of President Carlos Mendieta early Wednesday, agreed to accept Barnet.

Edith Maxwell Weeps As Retrial Is Refused

Pardon or Appeal to Virginia Supreme Court Held Sole Hope of 21-Year-Old Teacher Facing Prison Term for Slipper-Slaying of Father.

By Virginia Lee Warren,
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Dec. 12.—The gloom that has pervaded the life of Edith Maxwell, 21-year-old Wise County school teacher, deepened perceptibly today when Circuit Court Judge H. A. W. Skeen denied her request for an opportunity to tell her story to another jury.

Her sole hope for freedom, apart from a pardon by Gov. Peery, lies in an appeal her attorneys will file with the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, asking for a reversal of the verdict of murder in the first degree, with its mandatory sentence of 25 years in the State prison.

The courage of the black-haired schoolma'am which was manifest for so long, cracked for a few moments when the aged Judge Skeen announced his decision. She burst into tears and sobbed convulsively on the shoulder of her brother, Earl.

It was the only display of emotion she made during the four-hour proceedings. Ever since the night she killed her father with a slipper when he attacked her with a butcher knife for remaining out until midnight, she has never lost hope of ultimate vindication.

Spectators dozed in their benches as the patriarchs of the county bar argued the motion. All the miners and farmers who came from miles around to hear the arguments leaned forward in their seats as the presiding judge spoke.

"Edith," said the judge sternly, "the ruling of this court is that the sentence be carried out according to the judgment of this court."

Sympathetic friends gathered around the girl in an effort to console her. There are not many of the people in this section of the county who are her friends.

"Then there is no further chance?" she asked pleadingly. Quick assurance came that an appeal would be taken to the highest court of the State.

"She oughtn' ter be let live," said an elderly mountaineer as he left the courtroom.

"Forty years wouldn't a bin too much fer the like of her," said another.

It is evident that the attractive girl, who went to the city to be educated, and then tried to bring her

New Deal Costs A Menace to All, Chamber Says

Balanced Budget, Slash in Government Expenses Urged on Nation.

By Felix Bruner.

The business war on the New Deal continued yesterday with a heavy bombardment by the committee on Federal finance of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Demanding that the budget be balanced, striking at emergency expenditures and severely criticizing the present tax system, the committee covered a broad field of both National and local fiscal affairs.

The report was sent to the 1,500 member organizations of the chamber, accompanied by a questionnaire asking the organizations, which include a membership of 700,000, to express themselves on a total of 17 topics having to do with taxation and public spending.

In its report the committee pointed out that the costs of government, national, State and local, in the United States equal one-third of the total national income.

"The menace of still larger demands for taxes," he committee said, "threatens all our citizens. All must bear the burden in one way or another. It is a fallacy to assume that well-to-do and rich individuals can be made to defray more than a small proportion of the total costs of government. There are not enough of them, nor do they have sufficient incomes, to meet more than a small part of total public expenditures."

Among recommendations made by the committee were:

Immediate reduction of Federal expenditures so that the budget can be balanced without additional taxes. This should be followed by further reduction in expenditures to permit reduced taxes.

Early discontinuance and rapid liquidation of dispensable activities, especially temporary emergency agencies. Notwithstanding appropriations available, expenditures for these organizations should be rigorously reduced.

Expenses above those necessary

Vast Purchases Fail to Achieve 3-1 Silver Ratio

Increased Inflow of Gold Blamed; Morgenthau Denies Policy Change.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Denying the Administration had altered its silver policy in any substantial particular, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday revealed that since late December, 1933, the Treasury had acquired 761,774,00 ounces of the white metal.

The Treasury's silver acquisitions had been kept a secret. The figure disclosed, while larger than expected, indicated, however, that the Treasury was almost as far from achieving a three-to-one ratio with gold as it was when the silver purchase act was adopted. The objective of the act was to reach such a ratio unless the price of silver first reached $1.29 an ounce.

The country's gold stocks have been increasing so rapidly that, despite the intensity of the silver purchasing program, the Treasury finds it difficult to keep abreast, much less make progress. In the week which ended Wednesday, the Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday, gold stocks increased $59,000,000, bringing the total to a new high of $10,068,000,000.

This inflow of gold had the effect of boosting excess reserves to the enormous total of $3,310,000,000. Total reserves reached $6,040,000,000. This further hike in excess reserves comes at a time when seasonal demands for cash and credit usually decrease excess reserves.

Morgenthau, at his semi-weekly press conference, asserted the Treasury had made silver purchases each day this week, but admitted that purchases were not made each day in the London market. The latter was unable to function Tuesday when no buyers appeared. Where the Treasury made its Tuesday purchase was not revealed.

The Treasury apparently purchased 540,000 ounces in the London market, permitting brokers there to fix a price equivalent to 59.6 cents an ounce, or 1.4 cents less than yesterday's quotation. The

3 Income Tax Fixers Jailed Pending Appeal of Conviction

Bail Refused After Jury Finds Trio Guilty of Conspiracy on Utility Man's Report; Two-Year Sentences and $10,000 Fines Possible.

Doors of the District Jail were closed on John W. Hardgrove, Henning R. Nelson and Frank B. McElhill last night following their conviction in the District Supreme Court on a charge of conspiring to "fix" the 1932 income tax return of Thomas N. McCarter, New Jersey public utilities tycoon.

The trio were found guilty by a jury after less than three hours' deliberation. Despite a motion by their attorneys that they be admitted to bail pending appeal, Justice F. Dickinson Letts ordered them remanded to jail. For the first time since they were arrested in connection with the conspiracy case, all three were forced to endure jail diet and bedding.

Hardgrove, one time assistant chief conferee of the Income Tax Bureau of the Treasury; Nelson, formerly an auditor in the Income Tax Division of the Treasury, and McElhill, income tax consultant, were convicted of a charge of conspiring between themselves to defraud the Government. The charge, narrowed down, is that they agreed to "fix" a supplementary tax charge against McCarter for a straight fee of $10,000 or a 25 per cent commission on what they saved him.

McCarter and the Government were engaged in a dispute over his 1932 tax. His return showed a taxable income of less than $40,000, but the Government contended his taxable income was more than $100,000 above that figure. The dispute arose over whether a large payment by McCarter to his son could be classed as a "bad debt" payment or was, in fact, a gift. If the latter, the additional tax was due.

At that point negotiations were begun between McElhill and the others. McCarter informed Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau of what was transpiring and the latter dispatched his ace investigative agents to inquire into facts. The agents tapped wires, placed dictaphones in consultation rooms, and trailed all of the defendants

'Treasure Island' Is Selected As The Post Toy Fund Picture

There was more good news for juvenile Washington last night.

This came with the announcement that the picture at Loew's Fox Theater the morning of December 21 will be "Treasure Island," starring Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper.

The special showing of this great picture has been made possible through co-operation of The Washington Post Toy Fund and Loew's Fox Theater.

Admission will be by a new toy, or an article of child's clothing, that will be passed on by Santa Claus to some child in the city who without this help would find no toy in his stocking on Christmas morning.

The Washington Post Toy Fund benefit shows at local theaters have been yearly features of its campaign to insure that no needy child is without a toy at Yuletide.

Adults are also welcome to attend the show, but they will be charged 25 cents admission, with which more toys will be obtained by The Post Toy Fund.

The eager crowds of children who will attend the show will find the doors of the theater open at 8:30 a. m. on Saturday, December 21, and the show will begin at 9 a. m.

Geneva Bars Anglo-French Peace 'Deals'

Powers' Move to 'Sell Out' Ethiopia Forced to Council Debate.

Duce 'Confident' of New Grants; Army Goes Ahead in Africa.

The Crisis Abroad.

League Council debate of Franco-British proposal for Ethiopian peace was forced by opposition of smaller powers. Oil embargo against Italy was held up.

Premier Mussolini was reported ready to accept the plan.

Britain's new secretary of war predicted the peace proposal "very likely will fail."

Left-wing discontent with Premier Laval's peace negotiations was growing in France.

Emperor Selassie was described as regarding the Franco-British plan as too "raw" to permit acceptance, although he is anxious for some sort of settlement.

Italians on southern war front prepared for an attack by 150,000 Ethiopians under Ras Desta Demtu, Selassie's son-in-law.

By the United Press.

Geneva, Dec. 12.—The Franco-British peace deal, whereby Italy would receive half of Ethiopia as the price of peace in East Africa, suffered a severe setback today when small powers succeeded in throwing the plan into the League of Nations Council for debate.

Maneuvers in the meeting of the League committee of 18 indicated the small members are aroused at what they considered an attempt of the big powers to "sell out" Ethiopia and railroad a settlement repugnant to the majority.

Diplomats believe the Paris proposals will have rough sailing in the council and may not receive League blessing—in which case, France and Britain agree, they would collapse. The bitter "sanctions war" of 50 nations upon Italy's economic and financial structure would continue with renewed intensity.

Poles, Turks Lead Revolt.

Poland and Turkey led the successful fight to refer the proposals to the Council, 14-power governing body of the Geneva organization. The small nations hold another card up their sleeve if they are unable to defeat the peace deal in the Council. Edouard Benes, of Czechoslovakia, may summon the Assembly, in which the small countries predominate. If Ethiopia then demands that the Assembly approve the proposals before she replies, the Franco-British effort is dead.

Capt. Anthony Eden, the British secretary of the League, and Premier Pierre Laval of France were careful to avoid the appearance of forcing their will upon the League.

Eden reaffirmed his loyalty to the League and agreed with Tytus Komarnicki, Polish delegate, that the Council should examine the plan.

"Any final settlement must be acceptable to the League as well as the two parties," said Eden, who is reported none too enthusiastic about the plan cooked up by his chief, Foreign Minister Sir Samuel Hoare, and Laval.

Britain Waits Suggestions.

Britain will accept the Council's suggestion, said Eden, adding: "The proposals are neither definite nor sacrosanct; they are suggestions which it is hoped make possible the beginning of negotiations for peace."

Laval also attempted to pour oil on the troubled League waters, stressing that Britain and France had "acted within the framework of the League."

Laval promised that the draft would be communicated to members of the Council soon. He continued:

"Our task then will end and it will be for the League itself to decide what should be done. We are least confident that appreciation will be given our effort, which had no other purpose than to hasten a settlement within the League of a

Moore Predicts Atlantic Plane Service by Summer of 1937

The inauguration of regular transatlantic airplane service by the summer of 1937 was forecast yesterday by Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore.

Moore is chairman of the Interdepartmental Committee on Civil International Aviation which has been conducting conferences here with official representatives of Great Britain, the Irish Free State, Canada and air line executives.

"When the full regular service is inaugurated, there will be four round trips per week," the Moore statement said.

Terminal points have not been selected but Moore said, "The Atlantic seaboard ports in contemplation are New York City; Baltimore, Md.; Cape Charles or Norfolk, Va., and Charleston, S. C., any one of which may be designated as ports of entry."

Final decision concerning the terminal of the ocean air line will depend upon the results of exploratory flights which will determine the exact route to be flown. These will be started next summer.

At the present time two general routes are under consideration. The longer run, by way of Bermuda and the Azores, probably would terminate at Cape Charles or Baltimore. This projected line has the

New Postoffice Building Soaked With Water as Files Burn.

Thousands Watch Spectacular Scene

Dense Clouds of Smoke Hamper Efforts to Locate Blaze.

Files on the sixth floor of the new fireproof Postoffice Department Building at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue were ablaze early today.

Five alarms called out all fire equipment in the downtown area. Private Sidney Carter, of No. 2 Engine Company, was overcome by smoke and was carried unconscious from the smoke-filled building by firemen. His condition could not be immediately determined.

For nearly a half hour after the first alarm was turned in, firemen groped through a smoke-filled corridor on the Twelfth street side of the building trying to find the base of the blaze.

It was one of the most unusual fires in the city's history.

Smoke poured from the fifth and sixth floors of the building, but for many minutes firemen were unable to find anything upon which to turn their hose.

Dozens of Series.

Dozens of hose were hauled through the fifth-floor windows by ropes. The hose frequently slipped to the ground and the process of hauling was repeatedly begun over again.

There are no windows on the sixth floor of the building on the Twelfth street side and hose had to be dragged through fifth-floor windows and hauled through corridors to the sixth floor. Thousands of feet of hose were strung along the building's side as a crowd of several thousand filled the street below.

Water ran in rivers along the sixth-floor corridor. Firemen in gas masks sloshed along in it. Hundreds of gallons of water seeped into the floors below, running down stairways and along walls, damaging valuable office equipment and fixtures.

Files Threatened.

Fire officials said the fire was in the records belonging to the Bureau of Reclamation of the Interior Department. Across the hall from the blaze are the offices of Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. Firemen were stumbling over his office furniture and dragging soaking-wet hose across his heavy carpets.

In the building are the offices of the Postoffice Department, the Interstate Commerce Commission and several other Government agencies.

The scene in streets adjoining the building was one of greatest confusion. Firemen struggled with long lines of tangled hose. Police and fire conveyances screamed through the downtown section with sirens open.

The first alarm was turned in shortly after midnight. At 12:45 Chief Fire Engineer Charles Schrom reported the first water was turned on the blaze.

Records Blazing.

Books and papers and records were blazing in at least two rooms on the sixth floor. The wall of smoke was virtually impentrable along the windowless corridor. Firemen were able to enter the corridor only if equipped with gas masks, and then at great peril.

The records were said by building guards to be those of both the Postoffice Department and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

It was the third fire in the new fireproof building. The second occurred in the basement last June. The first was framework while the building was under construction.

The fourth alarm was turned in so that firemen on the scene might be relieved by fresh men. The smoke was so dense that many firemen were on the verge of collapse.

4 Big Powers Refuse Japan Naval Equality

Three Dominions Join in Rejection of Parity With U. S., Britain.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 12.—Four powers and three dominions joined today in firm rejection of Japan's naval conference demand for equality on the seas with Great Britain and the United States.

British determination to sign no treaty giving any nation other than America the right to naval parity emerged with full emphasis. The United States, France, Italy, South Africa, Canada and Australia joined in the refusal.

Thus the conference, designed to lay a basis for replacing the expiring London and Washington naval limitation treaties, headed for a deadlock, although some hope prevailed in all delegations that a compromise may yet be possible.

The Japanese delegation departed hastily as today's session broke up. The hurried exit at first created the impression they were walking out of the conference, but well-informed sources said this was not the case.

Demand Held Inconsistent.

British determination to resist the Japanese demand was linked in responsible quarters with the British viewpoint that no treaty can be arranged on a basis of any understanding or commitment outside the document itself.

The same viewpoint, it was understood, was held by the other delegations. It seemed to dispose of past suggestions that the Japanese might be satisfied with equality only on paper, with an understanding they would not build up to the authorized limits.

For the Americans, Norman H. Davis plainly told the Japanese the United States wants to continue the 5-5-3 equilibrium established by the Washington treaty. This fitted the British position.

Both powers declared the Nipponese demands for equality of fleet and armament were inconsistent

Bellanca Deals Are Described By 5 Witnesses

SEC Continues Efforts to Prove M. J. Meehan Engineered Rise.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission, attempting to prove charges of illegal stock manipulation against Michael J. Meehan, Wall Street broker, yesterday drew from five witnesses a description of their purchase of Bellanca Aircraft Corporation shares.

Except in one instance, the witnesses testified under cross-examination by defense counsel that they had never discussed the trading with Meehan. The Government has sought to prove that Meehan engineered a rise in Bellanca shares, allegedly reaching a peak last May 17.

The exception was Malcolm Kingberg, financial consultant to Meehan, who bought the stock, he said, to become a director in Bellanca, after Meehan had advise him he was buying control of the company.

Neither George A. McNulty nor Jacob Gruber, the commission's counsel, tried to give significance to the purchases. On Wednesday John J. Burns, chief counsel, said the commission's case would be proved circumstantially, by fitting together the pieces of a "mosaic."

Devoe Named.

Joseph Higgins,. a broker who called Meehan one of his "nearest friends," and Joseph Haggerty, a customers' man for C. D. Barney & Co., said they received their "suggestions" to buy Bellanca from Raymond Devoe, a New York financier. They each bought 300 shares.

Devoe previously testified to a tentative plan for buying Bellanca either from Meehan or in company with Meehan, from G. B. Bellanca, company president.

Previously, the commission had sought to link Devoe to Meehan as the latter's "agent," but Devoe emphatically denied the connection, and the commission did not attempt to demonstrate in what capacity he was an "agent."

Devoe also testified that no deals were consummated between him and Meehan, and that he never bought or sold Bellanca stock.

Bought 200 Shares.

Edward M. Bulkley, jr., custom-'s' man in Spencer Trask & Co., 'd he bought 200 shares on May on the recommendation of S. M. rry, previously identified as a ner in Devoe's firm of invest- counsellors.

It also followed the closing of a deal between G. M. Bellanca and Mrs. Meehan, wife of the broker, for the purchase of stock from G. M. Bellanca, which deal Andrew Bellanca said he knew had been consummated the day before.

Cummings Dramatizes Jam Clogging Up Legal Machinery; 1,955 AAA Tax Suits Filed.

By Raymond Clapper

THERE was a reason behind the unprecedented appearance of Attorney General Cummings in the District of Columbia Supreme Court to argue a group of injunction cases arising out of the new utilities act. Cummings is not a courtroom lawyer. It is not customary for the Attorney General to appear in court. And never in the lower courts.

His purpose was to dramatize the clogging up of the legal machinery which has occurred by the multiplicity of suits filed against New Deal measures. This was planned before Stanley Reed, United States Solicitor General, collapsed from overwork this week while arguing the Bankhead cotton act case before the Supreme Court, but the incident had the effect of emphasizing the Attorney General's point.

Cummings argued that the large number of suits filed by holding companies may force the Government to allow many of them to go virtually by default through inability of its legal staff to defend each case. He said that holding companies not only have large legal staffs of their own, but have the co-operative services of eight or ten large legal organizations—meaning apparently such groups as the American Liberty League's unofficial "supreme court." Cummings said the amount of work thus shouldered on his staff has become a cruelty.

Utilities lawyers retorted by offering to combine a number of cases, a suggestion which Cummings received coldly. They also remarked acidly that considering the total amount of money the Government was spending, it could easily afford to hire more lawyers.

Regardless of the merits of this controversy, the fact stands that under our archaic system we do not permit the Supreme Court to pass upon the constitutionality of legislation when it is enacted but wait until months of confusion, delay, and possibly heavy financial losses have occurred before we allow the Supreme Court to compare the law with the Constitution and decide whether they are in conflict.

Up until Tuesday, a total of 1,955 suits had been filed concerning AAA processing taxes—to test a law passed in May, 1933. That law will be nearly two years old before we know whether it is constitutional, or whether it was a ghastly mistake. Millions of dollars in processing taxes have been collected in the meantime. The damage has been done. Courts have granted 1,164 temporary injunctions to restrain collection of processing taxes.

Cummings thinks opponents of the New Deal are engaged in a war of attrition by clogging the courts. Possibly so. But that is exactly what our legal system encourages—that and a handsome living for thousands of lawyers engaged in these cases. Not even Cummings, in his hour of travail, would think of breaking the union rules. The legal profession clings to this lucrative procedure like a union labor walking delegate insisting that three men work where one would be sufficient. Lawyers, who are the dominant profession in Congress, are not interested in abolishing this racket. Therefore it isn't abolished. So we go on insisting upon months or years of chaos before we permit the Supreme Court to do its stuff.

John Hamilton, of Kansas, will continue for some time on the headquarters staff of the Republican National Committee and devote himself to building up the party organization without regard to Presidential candidacies. However, in the event that Gov. Landon becomes a formal candidate later on, Hamilton is expected to resign to manage the Governor's campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination. Some of Gov. Landon's friends had urged that Hamilton become associated with Gov. Landon immdeiately, but it is understood that others among the Governor's advisers believe it would be premature to set up a formal organization now.

This is taken to indicate that Gov. Landon does not expect to declare his intentions for some weeks, perhaps not until in February. In addition to his work on the headquarters staff of the National Committee, Hamilton is Kansas' National Committeeman and is general counsel for the committee. He would still retain the two latter positions in any event.

Unless this Administration is willing to submit indefinitely to a sentence of cruel and inhuman punishment, it will seek in the coming session of Congress to repeal the silver purchase act, which has turned into the outstanding monetary farce of the New Deal, not even excepting the gold-price juggling experiment.

Congress ordered the Administration to buy silver until the price reached $1.29 an ounce or until silver stocks equaled one-third of the gold stocks. For two years the buying has gone on. A great government, with tremendous reserves was out to buy up tons of silver. China, the chief silver-using country, finally decided to abandon silver for monetary use, go on a managed, or paper currency, and sell its silver to us. Why not? We bought and bought.

The price finally went up to 77 cents. Still we were a long ways from the $1.29 price. Worse yet, gold was coming in faster than we could buy silver. So that instead of approaching the 1-to-3 ratio we are about where we were—on a 1-to-7 basis.

If this goes on forever, we might possibly corner most of the silver in the world and then we could bury it in Kentucky along with the gold which the Army is now guarding there, while the rest of the world goes on an index dollar, or a star dust base, or anything else it wants to use for money. It would be cheaper to endow the silver people for life than to try to save them by buying up millions of dollars' worth of foreign silver in order to boost the price.

It isn't any wonder that newspaper reporters are doubting persons. Secretary of Navy Swanson and half a dozen of his heaviest admirals spent two hours in mysterious conference at the White House. It was explained they were discussing matters pertaining to the naval reserves.

But just to check up on the official explanation, when Admiral Reeves, chief of the fleet, emerged from the two-hour conference, reporters asked him how many men were in the naval reserve.

He didn't know.

A. F. L. Pledge To Co-operate Elates Berry

Six-Point Labor Program Renders Its Statement Significant, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

George L. Berry expressed himself as elated last night—and added that industry should be—at the position the American Federation of Labor took toward his industrial council plan.

President Roosevelt's co-ordinator for industrial co-operation pointed to a brief statement over the signature of William Green, A. F. of L. chief, and 15 other labor leaders, which said that they intended "to co-operate in every manner possible with the co-ordinator and the representatives who have been chosen by the several groups representing management * * * to formulate a program which will deal effectively and directly" with industry's problems.

"That's industrial statesmanship," Berry said.

He said he regarded the statement as particularly significant in view of the six-point economic program the federation advanced at labor group meetings which followed the turbulent industry-labor conference of last Monday.

Advanced Program.

This program called for enactment of the Black-Connery 30-hour week bill, the O'Mahoney bill to place industries under a Federal license, formulation of wage and hour standards by management and labor "organized on a Nation-wide basis," minimum wage standards for women and minors, "unstinted enforcement and compliance with" the Wagner labor disputes bill, and elimination of child labor, night work for women and home work.

Berry told reporters that he had no doubt the labor representatives on the council, scheduled to meet next week, would again suggest this program as their solution for unemployment.

Berry said he was pleased with the outcome of the conference. Eighteen industrial groups had agreed to send representatives to the council. 11 have not yet "made up their minds," while 12 decided not to, he said. But those figures, he contended, did not tell the whole story.

A number of individual industrialists among the groups that declined to send representatives were going to come into the council, he said. The same situation prevailed, he added, among the groups that had not made up their minds.

New Dollars to Bear Both Sides of U. S. Seal

A newly designed $1 silver certificate will be in the hands of most banks for public distribution Wednesday, the Treasury Department announced yesterday. Its most noticeable change in design is on the back, which presents both sides of the Great Seal of the United States.

The front of the seal bears the already familiar eagle design with its motto "E Pluribus Unum." But the reverse is unfamiliar to the general public, never having been presented before on any stamp, coin or bill. Its design is an unfinished pyramid, surmounted by "an eye in a triangular glory." Above it is a Latin motto, "Annuit Coeptis," roughly translated as "He (God) prospers our endeavors." Below is the motto, "Novus Ordo Seculorum," translated as "a new order for the ages."

3 Tax 'Fixers' Ordered to Jail Pending Appeal

while they were completing arrangements, it was shown, to lower McCarter's tax so they could allegedly make a fee.

Mr. Morgenthau publicly named McCarter a public benefactor for informing him of the alleged plot. He once expressed the opinion that others should adopt the high sense of citizenship shown by the New Jersey magnate in calling to the attention of the proper authorities suspected derelictions of Government employes.

Race Winnings Told.

Testimony of Hardgrove that he earned an income of $81,000 through his ability to pick the winners of horse races featured his testimony, though he denied he had ever attempted to secure a reduction of McCarter's tax. Nelson, his associate and subordinate, likewise denied any participation in the scheme, while McElhill, suave appearing tax consultant, acting on the advice of his attorney, declined to take the stand.

Because of their convictions, the trio face maximum sentences of two years and fines of $10,000. A motion for a new trial will be filed this week and will be argued Friday of next week, attorneys said. United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and his aid, George McNeil, prosecuted the case.

Call on Borah By Vandenberg Stirs Comment

Both Refuse to Discuss Parley; Hague Scores Democrats' Delays.

By the Associated Press.

A conference yesterday between two Republican Presidential possibilities—Senators Borah (Republican), Idaho, and Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan—stirred political speculation, but brought no enlightenment from either participant.

Neither Senator would discuss what took place so far as the Republican Presidential situation was concerned.

"He's an old friend of mine," commented Vandenberg, who visited Borah's office for the conference.

"I'm not a candidate for anything. I will enter no primaries. It is not only my hope, but I am confident, that Michigan will send an uninstructed delegation to the national convention."

G. O. P. Changes Seen.

Other political developments here yesterday included speculation over the make-up of the Republican senatorial campaign committee and the refusal of Democratic leaders to comment on charges by Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, that they were not aggressive enough in defending President Roosevelt's record.

Hague, vice chairman of the national committee, said in Jersey City that the Democratic committee was giving the Republicans "the entire field."

Senate Republican leaders here said, meanwhile, that five minority members—three Easterners and two from the Northwest—were under consideration for appointment to the -1936 senatorial campaign committee.

Davis in Group.

The group, which will have charge of the drive intended to re-elect a dozen sitting Republican Senators and to elect Republicans in place of the 20 Democrats facing re-election, includes Senators Davis, Pennsylvania; Gibson, Vermont; Townsend, Delaware; Steiwer, Oregon, and Frazier, North Dakota.

None of the foregoing will be up for re-election next year. It is customary to name members of the campaign committee from such Senators.

Some thought is being given to appointing several non-Senators on an executive or advisory committee.

Navy Names 6 Rear Admirals And 25 Captains

Promotions Follow Parley Between High Command and Roosevelt.

Shortly after the Navy's high command held a two-hour mysterious conference with President Roosevelt yesterday the Navy Selection Board announced the promotion of six captains to be rear admirals and 25 commanders to the rank of captain.

The Navy's new admirals will be Lewis B. Porterfield, Ralston S. Holmes, Charles A. Blakely, Harold R. Stark, Frank H. Sadler and Andrew C. Pickens. Stark now has the temporary rank of rear admiral because he is chief of the Ordnace Bureau. He will now become a permanent rear admiral.

The White House conference, however, was not believed to have had any direct connection with the promotions announced. If it did, none of the participants made any mention of it. Indeed, all insisted that the conference was devoted to a discussion of ways and means of making the Naval Reserve more attractive to young men.

Vague Announcements.

But Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson as well as the others attending the conference—were vague about what was discussed. Asked how many additional men were desired for the naval reserve, Secretary Swanson replied "all we can get." Although this was supposed to be the topic discussed with the President for two hours, two of the admirals present did not know the present strength of the naval reserve personnel. A third said it was 30,000 men.

But although they would not divulge details, all stuck to the story that the naval reserve was the topic of the conference. Privately one high-ranging officer said that the London Naval Conference and fleet ratios were not mentioned. Nor was the department's general budget discussed, he said.

In addition to Secretary Swanson those at the White House conference included Admiral Joseph Mason Reeves, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet; Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation; Rear Admiral Joseph Taussig, acting chief of Naval Operations; Perceval Rossiter, surgeon general of the Navy; Rear Admiral Christian Peoples, director of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department, and Capt. Wilson Brown, the President's naval aide.

Admiral Reeves Presides.

Admiral Reeves presided over the selection board that named the officers for promotion.

Other members of the board were Vice Admiral H. V. Butler, commander of aircraft of the Battle Force; Vice Admiral William D. Leahy, commander of battleships of the Battle Force; Rear Admiral David Sellers, superintendent of the Naval Academy; Rear Admiral T. C. Hart, commander of cruisers of the Scouting Force; Rear Admiral Claude Bloch, judge advocate general of the Navy; Rear Admiral C. H. Woodward, commander of destroyers of the Battle Force; Rear Admiral W. E. Watson, president of the Naval Examining Board; Rear Admiral J. R. Defrees, commander of the Washington Navy Yard.

In addition to naming the six captains to become rear admirals the selection board nominated 25 commanders to become naval captains as follows:

Ernest Wheeler McKee, William Hubbel Pashley, William Reynolds Purnell, Frederic Tabor Van Auken, Thomas Cassin Kinkaid, Harry Gordon Donald, Worrall Reed Carter, Robert Rutherford Morris Emmet, Samuel Spottswood Payne, Theodore Stark Wilkinson, William Ward Smith, David Irvin Hedrick, Olaf Mandt Hustvedt, Harold Travis Smith, Preston Bennett Haines, Frank Thomson Leighton, Alva Douglas Bernhard, Penn Leary Carroll, Benjamin Vaughan McCandlish, Alan Goodrich Kirk, Francis Worth Scanland, Joel William Bunkley, Harold Cecil Train, Lee Payne Johnson and Monroe Kelly.

The officers named to the higher grades will assume their new ranks when vacancies occur during the coming year.

Capt. Porterfield at present is the chief of staff of the Twelfth Naval District in San Francisco. Capt. Holmes is the chief of staff of the commander of the battle force.

Capt. Blakely, who holds the D. S. M., now is taking a course of instruction at the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla. Capt. Sadler is the secretary of the Naval War College at Newport, R. I. Capt. Pickens is the chief of staff of the commander of the scouting force. He makes his home in Alexandria, Va.

Of the commanders raised to become captains, Preston Haines makes his home here at 3100 Connecticut avenue. Theodore Wilkinson, another to be named for promotion to a captaincy, holds the Medal of Honor for service at Vera Cruz in 1914. He lives at Hockley, Rosslyn, Va.

Moore Predicts Atlantic Plane Service by 1937 advantage of better weather conditions.

The northern run, by way of Newfoundland and Ireland, probably would be started from New York City. Whether the foggy weather along this line would prevent a year-around schedule remains to be determined by experimental flights. One tentative plan under consideration is to fly the northern run during the spring and summer months, switching to the southern line in colder weather.

Passengers, mail and express would be carried on the transatlantic planes. Full reciprocity between British and American interests has been agreed upon in order to facilitate landing privileges and operating details.

Last week Postmaster General Farley dealt a blow to chances for the joint operation of an international air mail line when he announced that the Postoffice Department would make payments only to American-operated lines.

Since then it has been intimated that the eastbound transatlantic mail would be carried exclusively by American lines, while the westbound British ships would carry the mail from abroad to this country. This plan would allow this Government to pay its entire share of the cost of the operation to an American company, its backers contend.

Moore's statement yesterday did not mention any specific companies, but it is known that Imperial Airways, co-operating with Pan American Airways, are planning to start the exploratory flights using big flying boats of the Clipper plane type.

League's Peace Efforts Derided By Vandenberg

Situation Proves U. S. Wise in Neutrality Course, Senator Says.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, hitting at the Franco-British peace proposal, yesterday asserted it demonstrated that American peace could best be obtained through mandatory neutrality legislation rather than co-operation with the League of Nations.

His attack on the proposal to cede part of Ethiopia to Italy in order to stop hostilities followed criticism along similar lines by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, with whom he conferred yesterday.

The Michigan Senator, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations and Munitions committees, said in an interview that the League's record showed "its peace idealism" to be "less powerful as an impulse than the political necessities of Europe."

"Serves Major Powers."

The peace plan, Vandenberg said, "serves the primary necessities of the major powers instead of League objectives." Similarly, he said, sanctions against Italy were not proposed as peace measures, but because the proponents had "chips in the game."

"We are utterly confirmed," he added, "in our traditional belief that the way to peace is not through co-operation with or membership in the League because it is a political league before it is a peace league.

"It follows that we can't hope for a neutrality program that isn't entirely apart from League considerations. Since Congress last passed on neutrality there has been a multiplied and irresistible demonstration that we've got to run our own neutrality show."

Lauds Roosevelt, Hull.

The Senator said he had "nothing but praise for the efforts of President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull to make our neutrality real." He added, however, that he was "absolutely opposed" to vesting discretionary neutrality power in the Chief Executive.

Neutrality legislation must be mandatory, Vandenberg said, "or you can't escape the same infirmities involved if we were League members—namely, putting yourselves at the mercy of somebody's decision on the equities of the situation."

"If you leave discretion with the Executive to name the aggressor," he said, "you absolutely tie the hands of the Congress and the country against any escape from the implications of the first step."

Leaving discretion to the Executive, he said, creates circumstances beyond the control of the President.

Conferees Refuse Japan Navy Parity

with Japan's position in favor of equality of security.

Defense Needs Contrasted.

The difference cited by both nations was that the defense obligations and requirements of Great Britain and the United States are so much greater than those of Japan that larger fleets are needed.

These fleets, it was contended, would in no way jeopardize the security of Japan.

Despite repeated efforts to pin them down on this and other points, the Japanese refused to name the "common upper" tonnage figure at which they want the three navies pegged.

Full definition of the Japanese position, therefore, had not yet been presented to the conference.

Tomorrow, however, the Japanese are expected to disclose further details of what they want. Informed sources said they have not yet issued any ultimatum that they will not continue in the conference in the event the quality issue is finally rejected or uncompromised.

The British delegates hope that once the security issue is thoroughly threshed out, a situation will be created whereby present navies can be held at status quo strength for a number of years.

After that, another conference would be called, possibly in the light of an improved and clarified international political situation.

France, insisting on her full rights, objected to the idea of limiting a tonnage agreement to Japan, the United States and Great Britain. Italy was understood to have joined in this opposition to a three-power common upper tonnage limit.

Convicts Recaptured.

Walla Walla, Wash., Dec. 12 (AP). The last two of eight convicts who fled Monday from the Washington Penitentiary through a tunnel which it took them more than a year to dig were captured today on a woman's telephoned tip at Spokane. They are Herbert Jackson and John Weaver. The others were captured the day of the escape.

Duce Reported 'Sure' He'll Get Further Grants

Observers Say He's Satisfied With Franco-British Peace 'Outlines.'

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Dec. 12.—Premier Mussolini, intent on driving a good bargain for Ethiopian peace, was represented in responsible quarters tonight as satisfied with the main outlines of a Franco-British proposal to end the conflict.

It is quite probable he will accept it as a basis for discussions, these sources said, because he is confident he can get favorable modification of several "unsatisfactory" details.

Despite a spokesman's warning against "excessive optimism," popular feeling was reflected in higher stock and bond prices. Government securities advanced another point today. Since Monday, state bonds have gone up an average of four points.

Stocks Also Rise.

Bank and industrial issues improved, Fiat Motors rising 9 points during the week, while chemicals and other war stocks remained unchanged.

The Mussolini spokesman was careful to point out that the peace proposals are merely "bases for negotiations" on settlement of the African war.

Il Duce may want to "ask some questions" before he replies, the spokesman said; and when he does reply, it will be to the authors of the peace plan and not to the League of Nations.

Experts and marked maps showed the dictator what land he would get in northern and southern Ethiopia if the peace proposals go through, and the vast lake region he would have for "colonial expansion."

Yet Mussolini went on with his war and his resistance to sanctions, and even found time to sign an accord with Belgium for the settlement of commercial debts during the economic siege.

The sidetracked proposal for a League of Nations oil embargo and its possible threat of a European war faded. The Fascist on the street thought the peace offer to be a great victory for Italy.

He never has been told officially just what Il Duce wants in Ethiopia, but he contrasted the offer of Italian sovereignty or control over nearly half of Ethiopia with the League's world siege to prevent any conquest.

Hope for Peace.

The average man hoped the offer would be considered adequate. Few urged its acceptance simply to obtain peace. Most said they were willing to let Mussolini decide.

Officials said Il Duce might reply tomorrow or "the first of next week."

Throughout Italy, the radio announced today as "this twenty-fifth day of siege."

Small Powers Block 'Sell-Out' Of Ethiopians

dispute, the prolongation of which weighs heavily on the world."

The committee of 18, known as the "sanctions general staff," sidetracked the plan to embargo Italy's oil, coal and metals. Komarnicki, of Poland, suggested that it be laid aside to permit peace negotiations to continue in a favorable atmosphere.

In this the members were deferring to Premier Benito Mussolini's pride, for the Italian dictator has said he will not be forced into peace talks.

Komarnicki insisted that present sanctions against Italy must continue. The Polish delegate asserted that the Franco-British plan creates an entirely new situation and that only the council has the power to deal with it.

"We think," Komarnicki asserted, "that we should abstain from any measure of political character until the moment the council is able to pronounce on the merits of the new propositions. The committee's adoption of any new measure would prejudice the work the council must undertake shortly in accordance with its own powers."

The Polish member implied that the council might wish to renew its own peace efforts through the committee of five.

Britain, France and the others bowed to the small powers' will and abandoned their plan to turn the scheme directly over to the committee of five, where—with Spain—the powers would have a majority, enabling them to negotiate with Mussolini and Emperor Haile Selassie as they wished.

Stone Falls 2,000 Ft. And Kills Watchman

Golden, Colo., Dec. 12 (AP).—A three-ton boulder, rumbling down a mountainside, killed a watchman today stationed to warn passers-by of that danger.

War Secretary Of Britain Sees Peace Collapse

Cooper Says London Will Push Efforts Under League Auspices.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 12.—Great Britain's new secretary of war, Alfred Duff Cooper, predicted tonight the Anglo-French peace plan "may fail and very likely will fail," but insisted the British Empire will continue to act "under the auspices of the League."

Failure of the current basis for settlement, he declared in a speech to his London constituency, is "likely" because it is difficult, after war has progressed for several months, "to find terms that will satisfy both sides."

He added:

"You can blame the British and French for putting forward these suggestions, but that is the only crime they have committed.

"There will be an opportunity for further negotiations and you may rest assured this Government will continue to act under the auspices of the League and according to the decision of a majority of the members of the League.

"The best thing to do at the moment is to wait and see what future developments are and to trust the country which has stood by the League."

However, this and other official reassurances that the peace plan is not being forced through failed to silence outcroppings of public opinion that were suspicious or condemnatory of the government's conduct of the affair.

The League of Nations Union adopted a resolution urging the government to "continue the policy of sanctions until they are effective and support no settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute which fails to make it clear that aggression does not pay."

Viscount Cecil, Sir Austen Chamberlain and Lord Allen will head a union delegation which is to see Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin tomorrow.

Unofficial reports that King George intervened to force through to completion the Anglo-French formula circulated today in diplomatic circles.

The monarch, it was said, was deeply concerned over the possibility that the war in Africa might spread to Europe unless a quick peace were insured.

Despite bitter opposition in the House of Commons on the ground that Italy was being allowed to dictate its own terms, the cabinet went ahead with the peace program.

Discontent Grows in Paris.

Paris, Dec. 12 (AP).—Left-wing discontent with Premier Laval's agreement with Great Britain to offer Premier Mussolini territorial concessions in Ethiopia was reported tonight to be growing in lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies.

It was likely Laval would be forced to defend his action when he returns from Geneva. Discord within the cabinet itself was reported. Friends of Edouard Herriot, minister of state and former premier, admitted he had disagreed with Laval on the territorial grants.

"Too Raw," Says Ethiopia.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Dec. 12.—Emperor Haile Selassie would like to make peace with Italy because his armies are becoming demoralized by constant bombing, sickness and scant food, but the Franco-British offer is "too raw" to permit acceptance, reliable authorities declared tonight.

Officials in charge during the Emperor's stay at the northern front said he would have no choice but to reject the plan—or to resign his throne. Government authorities asserted the Hoare-Laval scheme is merely a maneuver to evade the main issue of whether the League can make sanctions work against Italy.

KING FUAD I.

Sung Declares Council Move Ends 'Secrecy'

Open Diplomacy Forecast in North China, but Clashes Continue.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, Dec. 12.—Gen. Sung Cheh-Yuan, head of the new North China semi-autonomous regime, told newspapermen tonight that establishment of the Hopei-Chahar political council "marks an end to secret diplomacy in North China."

Hostilities, however, are continuing in East Chahar Province, he said, with Manchukuo attempting to install troops in six frontier counties.

"We are negotiating a settlement, but will never agree to this proposal," Sung declared.

Crucial Test Near.

The Chinese war minister, Ho Ying-Ching, was reported preparing to leave for Nanking. Withdrawal of his leadership will put the new regime in the two northern provinces to its first crucial test.

Nanking government officials had hoped the new administration would be permitted to absorb the East Hopei autonomous state, set up in a score of counties several weeks ago.

But these hopes seemingly were smashed when a Japanese military spokesman in Tientsin announced that for the present the independent East Hopei government probably would remain aloof from the Peiping regime.

Japanese Remain.

Japanese troops, meanwhile, remained at Tungchow, east of Peiping, prepared to repel any punitive action. Reports persisted that Japanese army reinforcements would arrive soon.

Official Japanese sources generally viewed the new North China regime critically and some predicted the council would last only about three months.

Pointing out that few members of the body knew anything about Japan and that many factions were represented, the Japanese saw little chance of united action on Sino-Japanese issues.

However, the council, composed of Gen. Sung and 17 other North China leaders, was regarded as predominantly pro-Japanese.

Mexican Communists Flee Captive Ranch

Mexico City, Dec. 12 (AP).—Two hundred communistic agrarians, who seized the Mantla Ranch in the State of Puebla on Monday, escaped today as federal troops closed in.

An inspection of the property revealed they had destroyed all the crops and sacked the buildings, over which they had raised the red flag. Two Communist leaders were arrested in Atlixco, nearby textile center, accused of responsibility for the assault.

Nahas Is Slated Egypt Dictator UnderSelf-Rule

Constitutional Government Restored; Students Hail Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 12.—Thousands of red-fezzed Egyptian students, who for the past month have waged an anti-British conflict with police, paraded Cairo's streets unmolested tonight, hysterically celebrating the return of home rule.

They still yelled, "Down with Hoare, down with England," heaped indignities upon British constables, but they discarded their rocks.

When elderly King Fuad signed a royal decree today restoring constitutional government to this country he probably brought to a close hostilities which have cost at least six lives and injured hundreds.

With Great Britain's grudging consent, Egypt soon will elect a few hundred lawmakers for a parliamentary government. The change will make a virtual political dictator of Nahas Pasha, trim moustached leader of the Wafds (Nationalist) Party.

Near Dictatorship Likely.

Wafd's methods are strongly reminiful of those of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini. He will run the country, with the British confined to guiding the foreign policy and protecting Egypt from aggression.

Britain's decision to "backwater," it was learned, was nicely timed. Several thousand railroad workers, who had played leading parts in previous riots, had decided to join the students.

Egypt's 1923 constitution was suspended December 1, 1934, and, although Egypt was nominally an independent kingdom, it was under British domination. Because of this the students instigated frequent riots in the last few weeks. Egypt once was a British protectorate.

Cabinet Recognition Blocked.

Sir Miles Lampson, British high commissioner, a highly reliable source said, called upon Premier Tewfik Nessim Pasha last night and told him Britain had withdrawn its objection to bringing the constitution back to life.

The political situation had become so threatening that yesterday Premier Nessim had agreed to resign with his cabinet today. Restoration of the constitution, however, prevented this necessity—for the time being at least.

Students yesterday visited all prospective candidates for the new cabinet and told them reinstitution of the constitution was necessary, otherwise rioting would continue; and it did continue last night—crowds smashing ten street cars and wrecking street lamps. They also tried to burn the main railway station.

One angle in the troubled situation was the Italo-Ethiopian war because of increased tension in the Mediterranean. Egypt, although not a member of the League of Nations, under British guidance is applying sanctions against Italy—with which the country has had close economic and blood ties for centuries.

There was a small disorder at Alexandria today when students stoned motor buses and damaged lamp posts. Police arrested several of them.

(In responsible London quarters the belief was expressed that King Fuad's decision was inadvisable, but it was said Great Britain would not oppose the action.)

Laval's Jaw Aches And It's Eden's Fault

Geneva, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—His jaw swollen, Premier Pierre Laval rushed to a dentist after the meeting of the League Committee of Eighteen today for the extraction of an aching wisdom tooth.

"I won't have an anaesthetic," he told the dentist, "because it dulls the intelligence, and I'll need my wits during a talk with Anthony Eden tonight."

Royalists Push Drive to Revive Austrian Crown

Supporters of Otto Spurred by Encouragement of Von Starhemberg.

By the Associated Press

Vienna, Dec. 12.—Monarchists, eager to see the Archduke Otto crowned Emperor of Austria soon, intensified their campaign today after receiving encouragement from Vice Chancellor von Starhemberg.

"The Legitimists' greatest gain as a result of Prince von Starhemberg's statement of policy is a clear declaration that monarchist activity is legal and in accord with the best interests of Austria," said the Legitimist leader, Baron Friedrich von Wiesner. "We go forward confidently."

The powerful vice chancellor said last night that nothing stands in the way of restoration if the monarchists adopt the conception of Government laid down by the late Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss.

Young Otto, now in exile in Belgium, is popularly supposed to favor a democratic monarchy more liberal than the present Austrian guild states, but monarchists said von Starhemberg and Otto are not far apart.

Von Starhemberg also called for Austrian leadership in central Europe and threw down a challenge to Hitlerism.

Six high school students were arrested in Leoben today on charges of high treason as Nazi sympathizers. Thirty others were expelled from school and placed in a concentration camp. This was believed pursuant to von Starhemberg's order for a thorough "patriotic house cleaning" in Austria.

Italians Await African Horde; Natives in Fury

Expect Attack by 150,000 Frenzied Ethiopians on Southern Front.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

With the Italian Southern Armies at Dolo, on the Somaliland-Ethiopian Frontier, Dec. 12.—Men and munitions were rolled up on the southern Italian front tonight to balk an expected attack by 150,000 frenzied Ethiopians.

Scouts returning to the Fascist line said warriors in those numbers were being massed at the head waters of the River Juba, which flows from Ethiopia into Italian Somaliland, by Ras Desta Demtu, son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Desta, the scouts reported, has inspired his troops almost to the point of berserk rage.

Among the units being prepared for the front line was the Tevere division, made up of foreign legion volunteers. These soldiers are equipped with movable refrigerators, ambulances and other equipment designed to combat the ravages of the desert, donated by New York Italians.

(Reports from Associated Press correspondents with the northern Italian army said the men of Marshall Pietro Badoglio eagerly were scanning radio news of the Anglo-French peace proposals, published in a newspaper at Asmara. The soldiers seized editions of the newspaper before the ink was dry, wondering whether they would have a chance to conduct their cherished advance on Amba Alaji, south of Makale.)

300 Ethiopians Slain.

Rome, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—News dispatches from the northern Ethiopian front today said Aussa tribesmen massacred 300 Ethiopian soldiers at Ladinigero in the Hawash Valley, east of Dessye.

The Ethiopians reportedly fled from Dessye, Emperor Haile Selassie's northern headquarters, during last week's bombing by Italian planes.

Submarines and Planes Hold Key, Says Stirling

New London, Conn., Dec. 12 (AP). Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, commanding the Third Naval District, today said submarines and airplanes will be used in such great numbers in the next big war that most nations will be forced into the fight to bring it to a close.

He addressed the graduating class at the submarine school, consisting of 29 officers prepared by six months of intensive training for undersea duty.

Submersibles, he said, would be in the forefront in event of war, as they are capable of carrying the conflict to foreign shores.

VanSweringens Parted at Last As Mantis Dies

Brothers Together at End; Heart Complication, Influenza Fatal.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Dec. 12.—Death dissolved a partnership today which carried the brothers Van Sweringen from the obscurity of rural Ohio to the Nation's largest private railroad operators.

Mantis James Van Sweringen, 54, the younger, succumbed to influenza and hypertensive myocarditis, an inflammation of the muscular portion of the heart wall.

His physicians announced influenza was a contributing factor, induced by "general exhaustion and mental and emotional strain," traceable to tumultous financial affairs of Van Sweringen interests subsequent to the 1929 market collapse.

Oris Paxton Van Sweringen kept vigil in the lonely hours before dawn beside his brother's deathbed in Lakeside Hospital before death at 7:15 a. m.

As they faced the world and won a Nation's recognition, the brothers awaited the advent of death—together.

In keeping with a characteristic modesty, almost akin to timidity, funeral services Saturday at the brothers' secluded home will be private.

The place of burial had not been decided upon.

Van Sweringen was born July 8, 1881, at Wooster, Ohio. Oris was then 2 years old.

The inseparable brothers developed exclusive suburban Shaker Heights, the scene of their boyhood, after having failed in a previous venture.

Their first venture into transportation was the purchase of a rapid transit line to serve Shaker Heights residents.

In quick succession, they acquired the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, the Toledo & Western, the Lake Erie & Western, the Detroit-Toledo Shore Line, the Chesapeake & Ohio, the Pere Marquette, the Hocking Valley, the Wheeling & Lake Erie and, finally, the Missouri Pacific and its subsidiaries.

Throughout their unprecedented expansion Mantis was the visionary, Oris the executor—yet associates asserted they ranked equally in business acumen.

Neither married.

They shared a town house and a country home with their sisters, Edith and Carrie.

Acquaintances assert it was traditional that all business matters, however trival, were settled by conferences between them.

Their unobstrusive personalities won the confidence of Wall Street's most powerful financiers.

After the collapse of the market in 1929 and the subsequent turning over by the Van Sweringens of a large part of their assets to New York bankers in an effort to keep their empire intact they were told by these financial interests to continue active operations of their widespread dynasty.

Senator Says U. S. Should Have Delayed Recognition.

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 12.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, who suffered a serious pneumonia attack in Moscow, returned today on the United States liner Washington, convinced this Nation should have "bided its time" in recognizing the Soviet Union.

William C. Bullitt, the American Ambassador to Moscow, returned on the same ship for the Christmas holidays. "Every place you go in Europe," Bullitt said, "you find profound admiration for President Roosevelt for his Administration and for what it is trying to do."

Senator Lewis said he was fully recovered from his illness.

Taber Demands Nation End Reciprocity Pact

Oneonta, N. Y., Dec. 12 (AP).—Repeal of the recent commercial treaty between the United States and Canada was demanded tonight by Louis J. Taber, of Columbus, Ohio, National Grange master, in an address before the New York State Grange here.

"It looks like we farmers have the hot end of the poker in Canadian reciprocity," Taber asserted. He told the Grangers that "we must start a fight to repeal all favored-nation treaties and to cut down the free list or else abandon present treaty-making methods."

'Treasure Isle' Chosen as Toy Fund Picture

ments in the interest of the special show and the toy fund from WRC.

"Decatur 5130" has become Santa Claus' personal number in Washington since the Terminal Taxicab Co. and its drivers volunteered to bring toys from citizens to The Post Toy Fund headquarters in The Post Building free of charge. The drivers are vying with one another as to the number of calls they answer for this noteworthy purpose.

Little Barbara West, of Klingle road northwest, joined the ranks of Santa Claus aids yesterday. She is 5 and a leader among the young folk of her neighborhood. Barbara Jean—that's her full name—reported with her first doll of the season in her hand and gave the assurance that other similar gifts were in sight from her friends and neighbors. "It's fun to help the children without toys," said Barbara Jean with a wide smile. "I am sure Santa Claus will come down my chimney on Christmas Eve and I want him to see other children in this town as well."

It was noted yesterday that men are responding to the appeals for dolls. They seldom come to The Post Toy Fund in person, but interesting parcels are sent from department stores where some man has stopped in, bought a doll and ordered it delivered to "The Washington Post Toy Fund, Washington Post Building." These donors are thanked by those in charge of this annual effort of The Washington Post to bring real joy into the hearts of little boys and girls in desolate homes at this time of the year. Two thousand dolls will be needed.

Californians Aid.

News of The Post Toy Fund has reached outside of Washington. Yesterday gifts were made to the fund from residents of California, while from nearby towns came gifts and also appeals. One woman in a small Virginia town on the outskirts of Washington wrote:

"I have six children in school and two small ones at home. * * * Perhaps there is someone with a Christmas spirit that would like to help Santa Claus at this house."

And from a sick mother came this letter: "I am a lone mother sick and with two girls to try to make Christmas happy. I am making my appeal to The Post.

"Try to remember my girls at Christmas. Without help I do not know what we can do. We are on relief and our budget is cut, so we only get enough for our rent and for some food, and nothing to spare for Christmas. I wrote to my case worker for shoes for my girls and I haven't heard from her as yet. May God bless all the kind folk and the little girls and boys who are trying to make Christmas joy for less fortunate ones.

"We are not able to buy The Post, but a friend of ours gets it every morning. After they get through reading it they send it to me to read and enjoy."

All donations for The Post Toy Fund will be acknowledged through the columns of The Washington Post. As the time is getting short, only 12 days before Christmas, it is urged that only new toys or those which do not need repair be sent to the fund.

New Deal Costs A Menace to All, Chamber Says

Balanced Budget, Slash in Government Expenses Urged on Nation.

for ordinary operations should be limited to advances on a reimbursable nature, and these limited to relief purposes. There should be no advances for financing activities competing with private business.

Taxing power should not be utilized as a basis for regulatory or prohibitory legislation, or social or economic changes.

No excess profits or capital stock taxes or combination thereof should form a part of a permanent revenue system, and the present taxes should be repealed.

Groups of corporations closely affiliated through stock ownership should be allowed to file consolidated returns without penalty such as a higher tax rate. Dividends received by corporations should not be taxed.

Tax Revision Urged.

Capital gains should not be recognized for income tax purposes, but if so recognized there should be an equal and comparable right to deduct losses.

The tax structure should be so revised as to permit the Federal Government to forego levying of estate taxes, these taxes together with inheritance and gift taxes being reserved for the exclusive use of the States.

"If every dollar of the income of those reporting incomes of $100,000 or more were taken," the committee said, "this would defray the costs of Government for less than ten days; it would last the Federal Government less than four weeks.

"It would take about 61 cents of every dollar that was spent in retail purchases in the United States last year to equal the cost of all government in this country, or about 28 cents of every dollar to equal the cost of the Federal Government.

"All of the wages and all of the salaries of all of the people of the country, who are not on some government payroll, would defray the present costs of government in the United States for less than 18 months.

"It would take three-fourths of all the savings deposits in all the banks of the country to run all government in the United States for one year."

The committee declared that levies to support the cost of government "now cripple business, retard recovery, and threaten our economic system.

"The opportunity of the employed worker to improve himself is reduced," the committee said. "To the unemployed, the work dole or the relief dole of government can never be a satisfactory substitute for productive employment. The investor and the salary earner, the owners and managers of property, and all who are dependent upon their enterprises, are compelled to surrender to the Government an unreasonable proportion of any rewards that may be gained from thrift and hard application of personal effort."

Many existing taxes, especially income taxes, the committee found, already have passed the point of maximum productivity.

The committee suggested that Federal revenue policies should give due consideration to the revenue needs of the States, pointing out that the Federal Government already has gone far in monopolizing revenues which otherwise might be available to the States.

"The high personal and corporate income taxes now levied by the National Government," the report said, "have seriously limited the possibility of the States obtaining revenues from these sources. In recent years the Federal Government has again cut in on potential States' revenues by greatly extending the number of excises, including the prolific gasoline tax, which had previously been left entirely to the States."

Grenfell Cloth RAINCOATS

Sir Wilfred Grenfell, the Arctic explorer, developed this versatile cloth for use in the Arctic—it had to be light, yet strong, and, above all, weatherproof against snow and rain, and windproof, too. It could not be perspiration proof—because it had to allow body moisture to escape.

All these qualifications make it ideal for Washington's fickle and unpredictable weather. Try one on—wear it—you will thank Grenfell for this ingenious fabric, and join with Byrd and Hubbard in singing its praise.

Y.W.C.A. Building's Corner Stone Laid

An eight-story residence to house 200 girls of the Young Women's Christian Association started toward construction yesterday—with dabs of mortar being smeared on a cornerstone by the building's donor, Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong.

The dormitory will be built on Seventeenth street northwest back of the administration building at Seventeenth and K streets. Alexander Trowbridge, the architect, former dean of Cornell University's College of Architecture, said it would correspond to the administration building.

Mrs. Strong said she hoped the girls who live in the building have as much joy through the years as she had had in planning the gift. Mrs. Frederic Paist, president of the National Y. W. C. A. board; Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes and Henry Strong, grandson of the donor, helped seal the cornerstone. Mrs. Albert Atwood, president of the Washington Y. W. C. A., presided, and Dr. William S. Abernethy delivered a prayer. Seven times the members of the Y. W. C. A. Glee Club sang "Amen."

Col. Byroade, Former Guard Head Here, Dies

Retired Officer, Who Started in Ranks, Expires at Leavenworth.

Col. George Lawrence Byroade, U. S. A., retired, formerly adjutant general of the District National Guard, died yesterday at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., according to an announcement at the War Department. He was 64.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Florence W. Byroade, of Leavenworth, and a daughter, Mrs. Carl H. Seals, wife of Lieut. Col. Seals, who is on duty at Fort William McKinley, Manila, P. I.

A native of Pennsylvania, Col. Byroade started his military career as an enlisted artilleryman in 1894. Three years later he was commissioned a second lieutenant, serving through the various grades to the rank of colonel, which he attained in 1920.

During the Spanish-American War Col. Byroade served in Cuba and in 1900 he went to the Philippine Islands, taking part in the expedition on Marinduque Island.

During the World War he served as executive officer and as commanding officer of the 151st Depot Brigade at Camp Devens, Mass., and later as commanding officer of the Twelfth Division.

Between 1925 and 1931 he was on duty at the Command and General Staff School as assistant commandant and director. He came to Washington in 1934, serving with the District Guard until September 30, of this year, when he retired.

U. S. Asks Pool Of All Attacks On Utilities Act

Legal Staff Is Swamped, Says Attorney General in Court Debate.

lacks the facilities to fight a multiplicity of suits, Higgins replied:

"This Government is passing out enough money every day to hire 100 such staffs as they now have. We can't be made to wait, by any power your honor has, merely because the Government is swamped with suits. The only reason it is swamped is because it so arranged that situation for this court."

As oral arguments ceased, Justice Bailey said he would consider the pleas, but suggested in the meantime it would be well "if the parties can reach an agreement on the number of suits."

Cummings was on his feet at once, with:

"I think such negotiations would be entirely futile."

Higgins had difficulty in making himself heard above the buzz that followed this announcement.

"Of course we won't try to force ourselves upon the Attorney General," he said.

Sitting on the right of the Attorney General were Thomas Corcoran and Benjamin Cohen, Government attorneys who played an important role in drafting the utilities act. Corcoran often was in whispered conference with the Attorney General. On Cummings' left sat John J. Burns, chief counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission, who supplemented the Attorney General's presentation of the Government's case. Inconspicuously seated among the spectators was James M. Landis, chairman of the S. E. C.

Battery of Attorneys.

Higgins opened the utilities' case, followed by Dean Acheson, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, and a member of the law firm of Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson & Shorb; and James F. Oates, of the Chicago firm of Cutting, Moore & Sidley. The latter two spoke briefly for the United Light & Power Co., the United Light & Railways Co., Contenental Gas & Electric Corporation, American Light & Traction Co. and the Tennessee Electric Power Co., all of which are suing in the local court for injunctions against utility act enforcement.

Acheson pictured the utility holding company litigants as being forced "to wait as in a breadline, for justice."

"Suitors can not be called out of line, at the beck of the Government," he told the court.

Denies Parallel Is Offered.

He argued that the E. B. & S. case, which the Government is attempting to expedite, because of its interstate operations, offers no parallel with his own clients.

Earlier, Justice Bailey had observed that he failed to see how the utility litigants would suffer damages by waiting until the E. B. & S. case was decided, if a temporary injunction is granted meanwhile.

"When your honor says, 'How can your companies be injured?' your honor is without power to protect us," Acheson argued.

Higgins said utility companies would be unable to dispose of their securities, would lose great sums of money, and could not assure their technical help of their jobs, as long as their fate was in the balance.

"Every day we do not know how long we may live; we are damaged in every department," Higgins said.

The utility counsel compared Cummings' motion to delay injunction proceedings, to a motion to dismiss the case.

"It is just about the most astonishing procedure I have ever run across," he said.

"The Government says, in effect: 'You must live under a sentence of death until such time as the SEC shall take action to destroy you. Meanwhile you cannot grow, you cannot acquire other companies, you cannot sell your properties, you cannot hire an adequate staff, and you cannot sell your securities.'"

Cummings Pledges Fairness.

Burns disclosed the Government seeks to quash the nearly 50 injunction suits filed outside the District, charging lack of jurisdiction. This, if successfully consummated, would leave only the E. B. & S. case and the seven injunction suits brought in the District, unless new suits were filed here. Acheson observed this was a situation "your honor might well allow to develop."

Briefs in the case were filed yesterday on both sides, Justice Bailey granting a week for answers.

Vast U. S. Purchases of Silver Fail to Keep Its Ratio to Gold

New York price was fixed at 61¾ cents, 1 cent less than yesterday.

According to an Associated Press cable the London price was fixed late in the day after American sources purchased about 18 per cent of a total offering of approximately 3,000,000 ounces of silver.

Confusion Persists.

Morgenthau's remarks at his press conference did little to clear up the confusion into which the world silver markets were plunged early this week when apparently the Treasury slackened its buying. To what extent the Treasury will continue to absorb silver dumped on the world markets remained an enigma. The suspicion still prevailed here, moreover, that the Treasury was cautiously backing away from continuous silver buying.

The Treasury chieftain was prepared for questions about silver before he met the press. As soon as a reference was made to silver, he picked up a typewritten memorandum and read as follows:

"I am continuing to carry out the mandate of the silver purchase act, which says:

"'The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase silver at home or abroad for present or future delivery with any direct obligation, coin or currency of the United States, authorized by law, or with any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.'

Secretary's Powers.

"And get this," Morgenthau asserted after a pause:

"'At such times and upon such terms and conditions as he (the Secretary of the Treasury) may deem reasonable and most advantageous to the public interest.'"

Morgenthau thought that statement was self-explanatory. His emphasis in quoting the latter phrase was taken to mean that he proposed to exercise his discretion whenever he thought the public interest would best be served and that an abstinence from silver purchases for several days was not to be taken an abandonment of the program.

Asked why he had not made purchases this week, he replied that he had "bought silver every day this week—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, in many different places." He declined to reveal where, but it was pointed out by other Treasury attaches that in addition to London silver is traded in at Montreal, New York, Bombay and Shanghai.

Buying Effect on Price.

The Treasury chief likewise declined to state whether any silver had been purchased from the Chinese government. Cables from Nanking later in the day, however, reported that the Chinese government had denied offering to the United States 200,000,000 ounces of silver or selling huge quantities of the metal on the world markets, as had been variously reported.

Several hours after his press conference Morgenthau made public itemized data regarding the Treasury's silver acquisitions from January 1, 1934, to December 6, this year. This showed that the Treasury had cquired a total of 761,774,000 ounces of silver in that period.

Of this total 56,943,000 ounces represented domestic newly mined silver, purchased pursuant to the President's proclamation of December 21, 1933, giving effect to the London silver agreement of the previous July. Under this proclamation, since amended, 64½ cents an ounce originally was paid for newly mined domestic silver. This price subsequently was raised to 77:57 cents, which is now effective.

Bulk Comes From Abroad.

Included in the total acquisitions were 113,031,000 ounces of silver transferred to the Treasury under a Presidential proclamation nationalizing all silver bullion in this country on August 9, 1934. The President was authorized to take such action by the silver purchase act, passed June 19, 1934. A price of approximately 50.5 cents an ounce was paid for this silver.

The bulk of the Treasury's silver acquisitions came, however, through purchase abroad, 591,800,000 ounces having been obtained in this manner. The price paid for this silver ranges from 50 cents up to 81 cents an ounce.

Since the passage of the silver purchase act the Treasury has acquired 753,217,000 ounces. On that date the Treasury's gold holdings totaled $7,834,460,190. The gold holdings yesterday totaled $10,068,000,000, an increase of $2,234,000,000 since the passage of the silver act.

Progress Negligible.

To establish a ratio of three-to-one with this new gold alone would require 577,500,000 ounces of silver. Thus, despite the heavy purchases of the last 18 months, the Treasury was able to add only 176,000,000 ounces to building its silver stocks up against gold held at the time of the passage of the silver act.

The Treasury has made some progress but in view of the effort put forth it is regarded as most negligible. The Treasury would have to have approximately 2,600,000,000 ounces of silver to establish the three-to-one ratio for all the gold it now has.

It is difficult to estimate accurately the amount of silver the Treasury now has in ounces but it is approximately 1,180,000,000 ounces. Thus to bring its silver stocks up to the three-to-one ratio the Treasury would have to buy approximately 1,420,000,000 ounces of silver or almost twice as much as it has purchased since the silver act was passed.

Inadequate Bus Service.

Complaints against the bus service of the Capital Transit Co. are piling up at a rate that should give the officials of that company, as well as the Public Utilities Commission, a great deal of concern. Hundreds of protests against irregular service, poor ventilation and heating, overcrowding, etc., have been filed with People's Counsel Roberts. The Foxhall Community Association has gone so far as to advocate Government operation of buses in Washington, or at least Government competition with the existing line.

The transit company encountered numerous difficulties in the shift from street cars to buses on Connecticut avenue, not the least of which is the great increase in the demand for transportation. Naturally, the company did not expect that patronage of its buses would suddenly increase from 20 to 25 per cent above the volume of street car traffic. As a result of that gain, equipment is inadequate. Some new buses have been purchased and some routes have been revised, in keeping with public convenience. Yet it is obvious that the chief source of trouble has not been eliminated.

Public transportation is especially complicated in Washington because of the abnormal demands for service during relatively short "rush periods" in the morning and evening. The Washington Rapid Transit Co. has demonstrated, however, that bus lines can be operated efficiently, even with the use of some old equipment. The regular service of the W. R. T. C.'s Sixteenth street line indicates that satisfactory bus transportation can be developed on Connecticut and Massachusetts avenues, as well as other streets.

Indications are that the hearings to be conducted by the Public Utilities Commission next week will center upon the necessity of adequate supervision for the Capital Transit Co buses. For the most vigorous complaints are concerned with irregular service and overcrowding, which is a direct result of inefficient spacing and timing of buses. Of course, the P. U. C. has not indicated how it expects to handle this problem. But it will doubtless formulate some very definite conclusions after the public has had a chance to present its case.

In the meantime, sound business practice on the part of the company would seem to demand improvements in organization with the object of voluntarily correcting patent deficiencies in its service.

No Short Cut In Sight.

Washington's brief glimmer of hope that the airport tangle might at last be quickly straightened out has once more faded into realization that complicated problems of this sort cannot be solved by the magic of WPA funds. Of course, unemployed men could be put to work improving a landing field through the WPA if a site had been chosen and purchased. But selection of the most appropriate site is precisely the point of controversy which has frustrated all previous efforts to give Washington a safe and adequate air terminal.

Under present regulations neither PWA nor WPA funds could be used to buy the Washington airport site. Gravelly Point already belongs to the Government, but it does not appear likely that any agency of government would take responsibility for developing this, or any other prospective site so involved in controversy, without specific authorization from Congress. The chief significance of the Department of Commerce's plan to develop both of these fields, therefore, lies in the fact that this governmental agency is actively interesting itself in the local airport problem.

With the aid of the Commerce Department a National Capital airport bill might well be enacted by the forthcoming session of Congress. The apparent conclusion that the Government should finance the project eliminates one serious handicap—the want of District funds. Likewise the deadlock between the sponsors of Washington Airport and Gravelly Point would be broken by authorization of both projects. Yet it seems a trifle unrealistic suddenly to talk of two model airports for a city that has so long been denied even one satisfactory landing field.

No doubt the time will come when two airports will be essential for Washington. Other large American cities have two or more air terminals. Certainly the sites now available ought to be preserved for future development. But Congress may well decide that immediate construction of two model airports at a cost of some $5,000,000 would be too expensive a compromise. If so, the plan Assistant Secretary Johnson offered to Chairman Randolph, of the House District sub-committee, would prove to be only another complicating factor in a problem that is already deplorably tangled.

Explanatory Tremors.

Two seemingly isolated events demonstrate the far-reaching ramifications of the Italo-Ethiopian war, and help to explain, if not to extenuate, the peace proposals of the French and British governments.

One of these events is the return of full self-government to Egypt, under pressure of extensive rioting and mob violence by anti-British elements. This development, a direct repercussion of Italian aggression in East Africa, illustrates why the British government is so anxious to secure peace in Ethiopia as soon as possible. Nor is Egypt by any means the only zone of British domination where upheaval is threatened by the casual way in which Mussolini has been blundering around.

The other significant repercussion comes from Vienna, where Prince Starhemberg has not merely repudiated Hitler, but has called for Austrian leadership in a new pan-Germanic movement under a restored Hapsburg monarchy. This far-reaching project, affecting the status quo throughout all central Europe, is also clearly connected with the waning of Italian influence as a result of that country's preoccupation in East Africa.

That the tremors now shaking Europe should dispose the conservatives of both France and England to seek a hasty solution of the Ethiopian war is not surprising. Englishmen who see a possibility of a crumbling empire, and Frenchmen who anticipate that the structure of central Europe may be remodeled without their consent, are scarcely to be blamed if they reason that surrender to Italy of some Ethiopian territory is a small price to pay for the preservation of a stability with which they are on the whole well satisfied.

So the striking factor in the Anglo-French peace proposals is not so much their content as that such a storm of opposition has arisen, particularly in Great Britain, to this obvious effort to compromise principles with self-interest. A century ago any similar issue would have been definitely settled by mere agreement of the French and British governments. Today, with Geneva a forum for the viewpoint of small nations and anti-imperialistic groups, it is by no means clear that this will be the upshot, even though adherence to principle may mean the collapse of Fascism and unpredictable chaos in Italy.

It is not merely the aggressive policy of a single militarized nation which the incomplete League of Nations has been called upon to check. Geneva must also confront the deep-rooted tendency of the Great Powers to indorse any settlement, whether or not morally defensible, which promises to maintain the existing balance of power. That such settlements are no longer assured, even with French and British official sponsorship, is a measure of the advance made by the present League over the old Concert of Europe.

The Deadly Rapier.

Unless concepts of required literature have changed considerably, every schoolboy must still at some time receive the pleasant assignment of re-reading Jonathan Swift's tales of the travels of Lemuel Gulliver. On this second reading, it will be recalled, the Brobdignagians and the Lilliputians lose some of their flavor because they appear not merely as extremely large or extremely small men and women seriously going about the business of living, but rather as figures to carry the Dublin dean's satiric reflections on the court, the parties and the statesmen of eighteenth-century England. Thence arises the question of why satire is so seldom seen in political tourneys today.

From time to time, it is true, a flash of quick steel may still be detected in the arena's fray. As an example, there is the address this week of the Rev. Edmund Walsh. With poised thrusts, this scholar of Georgetown University pinked first the Administration and then its critics in a way that neither can blandly ignore. Being a man above politics, his exhibition was all the more delectable.

It is refreshing to behold the supple wrist thus supplant the more common bludgeon. It gives hope, too, that the art of satiric attack may yet return to raise political debate from the slough of drum-pounding and backbiting into which it tends to fall. For one reason, the backbiting has been so ridiculously ineffective. One column of Swift's "Drapier Letters" or one chapter of "The Tale of a Tub" had an effect on the turn of events in British affairs which many a noisy American politician would do well to ponder.

Not For Whatnots.

With certain relics of the past mere mention is enough to evoke a train of fond memories. Of such is the old rush-bottomed wagon seat. Ungainly and uncomfortable, its pedigree seems to stem from a union of necessity with the eighteenth century slat-back chair. But, as is usual when an item outgrows its usefulness and passes into the realm of collectible Americana, all is forgotten save its virtues. Temporal distance always lends enchantment to collectors.

The wagon seat did continuous duty. It graced front porches on Sundays with as much dignity as though it did not follow the song of the road the rest of the week. In a period when sentiment was a matter of perseverance and perspiration, the soft wood of the wagon seat lent itself admirably to the whittling knife. The prevalence of heart-entwined initials on these relics indicates an era of gentle and leisurely wooing.

Pomp and utilitarianism found their highest embodiment in the old wagon-seat. No emperor ever ascended his throne with more majesty than the head of the family exhibited in clambering to this perch. Today the survivors of this glorious army are gathering dust and cobwebs in lofts, along with other rusty and rickety implements once considered necessary to every household. In thus spending its declining years, however, the wagon-seat has one great advantage over most antiques—it cannot suffer the anti-climax of being displayed on a whatnot.

A New Deal In Housing.

So many protests against the Government's housing program have been made that it is reasonably safe to anticipate a new bill of criticism every time a group of builders come together. The representatives of the construction industry at Maj. Berry's industrial conference are no exception. After selecting a temporary committee to further the work of the conference, these delegates drafted a cogent appeal for "a declared Federal policy . . . in which the construction industry will have confidence."

The fact that this group came here to participate in the industrial conference suggests that it is not antagonistic toward the aims of the Administration. No doubt every expectation that the present Federal housing program might point the way to large-scale private construction was examined before any criticism was offered. That being so, the restrained yet bitter condemnation of this group is worthy of close inspection.

Builders are seeking, first of all, a clear statement of Administration policy, so they may know what to expect. Then they would like to have the haphazard Federal construction programs co-ordinated. They ask the Government to encourage the investment of private capital in construction, to assist in the determination of fair practices and labor relations, and to frustrate any new legislation that would handicap private building. In short, their program is based upon restoration of the construction industry as a very important part of any effective recovery effort.

The substance of this advice conforms to recommendations coming from many other sources. Housing experts have ceased to expect any substantial accomplishments from the present muddled program. It has failed to reduce costs of construction or to further mass production to any appreciable extent. It has confused and thwarted private industry. It has taken low-cost housing out of the hands of local governments, where it logically and properly belongs. And its achievements appear as "models" which are too expensive to be duplicated on any widespread scale.

One reason for this lack of progress is obvious. The Federal housing program is incidental to emergency unemployment relief. Too much attention has been given to the creation of temporary jobs and too little to the formulation of a basically sound housing policy. By approaching the problem from the wrong end only a minimum of employment has been created and housing has been placed on an artificial footing from which it must soon or late be rescued.

The outcome of this loose policy of Federal landlordism should now be sufficiently clear to enable the President to make helpful suggestions for reform in his forthcoming message to Congress.

Star Of Bethlehem.

Not only is Christmas celebrated in a hundred different ways in as many countries, but it means a hundred different things to as many people. To merchants, it's a time of rush and bustle; a striving to ascertain what the public wants and what it wants to give others. To writers of Christmas card verses, it means a burning of the candle at both ends; a tremendous strain to think of some new way of arranging the old, old words. To florists, it's an occasion for setting aside sweet peas and roses and turning the shop over to wreaths, mistletoe and aromatic spruce trees. To parents and children, it's a time of wishes and hopes, and secrets, and sacrifices. Even scientists, whose cold calculations and impersonal instruments seem so remote to the tinsel magic of Christmas, bend a microscopic eye on the miracle.

In seeking a scientific explanation of the Star of Bethlehem, the Hayden Planetarium of the American Museum of Natural History has concocted a practical demonstration of one theory on the subject. This is an idea of Prof. William Barton, jr., assistant curator of astronomy, which tends to prove that Saturn, Jupiter and Mars were so aligned in 6 B. C. that they formed the single star that guided the Magi to the manger. At the same time Dr. Barton holds no arbitrary brief for this possibility, adding that it might well have been a comet or, as others believe, "a miracle—something beyond the pale of science—something defying explanation."

No doubt there is much to be said for Dr. Barton's thesis. But right now, when the cockle-warming crackle of tissue paper is already heard in the offing, when Christmas carols are pealing out from department store organs, and children's faces are eager with anticipation, it seems somehow more plausible to accept the whole proceedings simply as "a miracle—something beyond the pale of science."

The only time I really, truly forget myself is when I'm hammering away at my typewriter.—Jean Harlow. It's a weakness that many have who hammer away at typewriters.

A Utility Investor Answers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos of the letter in The Post, signed by Arthur W. Dew, on the subject of utility holding companies, I desire to draw attention to a few truths and facts. It is complained that there is a much higher cost of light and fuel where management is under privately owned utility companies than there is under public owned managed concerns, but statistics show that rates are cheaper under privately-owned enterprises of this character. Statistics also show that taxes under Government owned and operated utility enterprises are higher than where private ownership manages and operate these kind of concerns. Assuming for argument's sake that the gentleman is correct (which he is not) in stating rates are higher under private management, what profit is there if we pay lower rates for these commodities under Government ownership when our taxes are doubled and trebled? The answer is there is none.

The correspondent seems to take delightful ecstasy in criticizing, lambasting and condemning to utter oblivion officials of the utility holding companies because they are waging a death struggle opposition against the "death sentence" clause of the Wheeler-Rayburn utility law now pending constitutional interpretation. In blissful ignorance he seems to think that this legislation was designed and aimed solely to curb and destroy utility holding companies and their offending officials, and that it will accomplish just that purpose and thus place another feather in the cap of the New Dealers' leader who was responsible for jamming it through the last Congress.

If for a moment anyone is imbued with the idea that this law will control and annihilate only offending officials of utility holding companies and that they alone are the only ones who will suffer and the only ones concerned in this business, let him at once be undeceived. I am one of the 15,000,000 investors who happen to have life savings in utility holding company securities, and my own investments in these concerns have depreciated in value more than 75 per cent, since the New Dealers' unwarranted and relentless war waged against these corporations. I am just one of these many millions of investors who happened to have placed their life's savings in this type of investment, of which many such securities were indorsed and recommended by the Government itself. So what about us? Are we to lose our savings just because we invested in this type of securities and in order to satisfy a silly, stupid whim of New Dealers who are running amuck these days?

Beaux-Arts Splendor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have noted your editorial in The Post on December 9 about the Beaux-Arts ball in New York. As you see it, such a resplendent affair should not have come off in these depressing times.

Now, as it appears to me, the affair didn't take bread out of anybody's mouth. Such affairs make work for florists, decorators, and hotel employes and quite a number of extra people who have to be hired for the occasion.

You might say that an affair like that ball makes the poor compare their own lot with the ease of those ball guests. Well, then, don't give the thing such detailed publicity. The fact that you do proves the fact that people like to read such stuff. As for comparisons, why, every street-digger can make them 100 times a day when snobs in limousines whiz by.

Another Angle For Witch-Hunters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note that Col. J. Miller Kenyon has joined Gen. Fries in denouncing the "terrible threat" of communism.

Like all Army and Navy officers, these two gentlemen should be fully qualified as authorities on communism. They have been the beneficiaries of a communistic system.

The Government gives each cadet officer a $20,000 education at West Point or Annapolis. Even in the academy they drew a Government salary, as Soviet students do. Then they graduated into lifetime Government jobs, at pay that put them forever above fear and want. Though retired now from the Army, both Fries and Kenyon, presumably, still get a healthy Government pension and will till they die.

In addition, all officers get free medical and dental service, free hospitals and free houses, a whole month's vacation every year at full pay, up to another month's sick leave with pay, plus many other valuable privileges not available to the rank and file of humanity.

All this at the expense of the common people of this country, for whom these "gentlemen by act of Congress" have nothing but contempt.

They do not hate communism for themselves. They simply do not want to share its benefits with others.

The First Torpedo.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reasoning in your editorial of December 10, "Peace Proposals," is admirable. The last paragraph brings to my mind how the League of Nations acted on the other fiasco of Mussolini, in the Corfu case, when with high-handed methods attacking a noble, helpless nation—Greece. The League did not act.

I think that was the first torpedo fired against the integrity of the League of Nations. So why should tears be shed now for the League of Nations when she only suffers the consequences of her inactivity in the past? HARRY DZOTIS.

Taxpayer's Grimace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We discover, via the President, smiling his billion-an't-nothin' smile, the great bankers smoked that 50-70 billion dollar pipe back in the hazes of '33. Not the dark ages, certainly, for that was in his own administration, but on the heels of "the darkest period in American history."

But does this stop the President pepping up his 1935 speech on what these spectral figures of finance said to him or through financial sheets in 1933? Not for a split second, and this peculiar discrepancy alone is worth the serious thought of any voter who can think without the aid of the brain trust.

The President's vagueness, not to say forgetfulness, re-Democratic platform pledges no further back than that, and his plunge from temperance to heave-over-all-ballast extravagance, is still vivid. Why deny these "money changers in the temple" the right of a similar switch, in reverse?

One thoughtless moment, especially if repented of, should not condemn these morons of finance. Mr. Roosevelt's dour prediction of 35-cent wheat and 5-cent cotton will probably not be held against him two years after its utterance.

At any rate his now famous statement takes high rank as a masterpiece of buck passing. While it's all a laugh to him, the implication is a wry grimace to the ultimate taxpayer. DAN K. MILLER.

Fascist Propaganda In The U. S.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Frank H. Simonds, referring to the neutrality position taken by the Roosevelt Administration, recently stated that Italian-Americans are organizing sanctions of their own against the Roosevelt Administration and attempting to bring political pressure in the form of threats at the next election.

The evident approval of these tactics by Mr. Simonds is regrettable from the point of view of a partiotic American citizen, in view of the fact that such tactics amount to the use of American voters by a foreign government in carrying out its foreign policy.

Mr. Simonds gives the warning that if neutrality is to be continued it will be too bad for all Democrats, an obviously partisan conclusion having the effect of encouraging Italian Fascist propaganda in this country. Equally partisan and prejudiced is his suggestion that an oil embargo by the United States will be interpreted by many persons as putting the Italian people in danger of starvation and freezing and the Fascist regime in danger of overthrow.

The Italian-Americans who are supporting Mussolini in the war of aggression in Ethiopia, by carrying on his propaganda in this country, by raising money to help finance the campaign and by using their franchise as American citizens to oppose American peace policies, include leaders who hold Government offices in this country, Federal employes, recipients of Federal relief and relief work.

For some of these Fascist propaganda activities public buildings have been used. School halls in various cities, including Washington and New York, and United States Government buildings have been made available at various times for Fascist propaganda meetings. Many of the so-called American patriotic societies have permitted and are permitting the use of their halls for Fascist gatherings.

Fascist meetings are being held in New York in Madison Square Garden December 14 and in Washington in Pythian Temple December 18. The purpose of the New York meeting is announced as a protest against American policy. It is also planned to raise money for the Fascist government at this meeting. The Washington gathering, it was announced on Sunday over radio station WOL, will be held for the purpose of pledging devotion to Italy and taking up a gold offering to support the Fascist war campaign.

I wonder if Mr. Simonds approves all of these gestures against the policy of the President and the State Department.

The Administration and the State Department are to be blamed for permitting the extensive campaign of Fascist propaganda in this country and the open intimidation of our political representatives by organizations directly under the control of and answerable to the Propaganda Bureau of Rome.

The Post Impressionist

A Decline And Fall.

Post Office, Friday.

RELUCTANTLY, hesitantly, yet inevitably, we add Edward Gibbon's mocking history to the long index of those classics which, though everybody tells you it is shameful not to read them, nobody now reads.

Is there any harmless substitute?

Most of "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" was read aloud to us at our tenderest age. As a freshman, we were compelled to read some of it to ourselves, in "History 1." But during our first newspaper days we had to plug our ears to those pipe-organ notes because an inartistic copy-desk disliked their influence upon our murder-story style. The comma became a full stop.

Therefore, it was to find some company in our disgrace that, a while ago, we inquired in this Column whether there were others like us.

"Does anybody," we asked, "read Gibbon any more?"

As that stout and humorous agnostic—not to say fat and heavy-handed historian—might well have phrased it: Although our expectations were modest, our realization proved superb.

We fished for a few meager sardines: we caught—

Can you catch a school of whales?

Anyhow:

Dr. W. B. Hastings, of both political Washington and (still) cultural Boston, immediately replied that he had never read more than a few chapters of Gibbon—and that he had never regretted the others.

More people went further—by freely, almost joyfully, owning they had never gone so far.

This morning, capping the controversial climax, Mrs. Louise Kidder Sparrow (sculptress and, if you please, classicist), says—

Well, just listen to her!

* * *

"I continue," she flatteringly writes, "to enjoy your Column daily, marveling how you do it and especially enjoying the quite human hints you occasionally drop that there is something of a task involved in turning it out happen what may. Let me, then, imitate your frankness by telling of my Gibbon experiences and to what, from them, I have turned."

* * *

We let her—more than gladly we let her.

"I read," she says, "one volume of 'The Decline and Fall' in Rome at the age of 16. Last spring, here in Aldie, Va., I, intending to read the whole work, read the first volume through. This fall, I struggled as far as Page 5 of the second volume.

* * *

"But there are six volumes!

* * *

"Today I am convinced that I shall die without reading one word of Gibbon more."

This from a lady who has adorned our Column with translations of Aristophanes. This from the student who has entertained your leisure, gentle reader, by applying maxims of Aristotle to the Administration of President F. D. R.—the saws of Solon to the late New Deal!

It is an end to the winter of our discontent:

"Now are our brows bound up with glorious wreaths,
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments,
And all the clouds that lower'd o'er our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried."—

Or words to such effect. We haven't Burton Stevenson's "Home Book of Quotations" near enough at hand.

But the substitute for Gibbon—the proxy, the locum tenens?

"Instead of 'The Decline and Fall,'" writes Mrs. Sparrow, "I am going to try Ferrero's Grandezza e Decadenza di Roma. It's in two fat volumes, but is written in an easy style. Should you not want to read it in translation, you'll find its Italian easy and consequently excellent practice for a lover of that language, even if the story be a bit heavy in parts—which I doubt, from having dipped into it here and there already.

"If only Ferrero will refrain from describing the horrible tortures Diocletian inflicted on an erring soldier—and refrain from confessing, as frequently as Gibbon, how little is known and how much is conjectured—I may be able to persevere through half of the work, at least!"

For our part, we like Ferrero's work because we like its author, whom we knew in the early days of his exile. But don't suppose that we have no admiration at all for Gibbon. We especially admire the Gibbon Plan to Make Footnotes Safe for the Young Person:

When Edward had something to say that was improper, he put it in a footnote. If it was only a little improper, he wrote it in French. If it was very improper, he wrote it in Latin. And if it was Quite Impossible, he wrote it in Greek.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Eden No Sissy.

Rome, Dec. 12.

THE Italians have been taught to hate the English, and they are doing a very thorough and enthusiastic job of it, but there are many Englishmen, including some puzzling individuals, who openly insist that Italy is right and England wrong in the present row. Therefore it is difficult to hate all Englishmen equally, without certain reservations, which is a weakness to be overcome by a firm effort of the will.

However, there is one Englishman who has the honor to be hated by all patriotic Italians with all the beautiful fury of which their passionate nature is capable. If the Italians could hate all his countrymen as wildly as they loathe this one, their war spirit would be 100 per cent. I am speaking of Mr. Anthony Eden, the beautiful man who represents Great Britain in the League of Nations and who came down to Rome to tell Mussolini how far England would permit him to go in Abyssinia.

Mr. Eden is only 38 years old and is the boy prodigy of international diplomacy. He is a little over 6 feet from the sandy plume of his head to the polished boots which project out from his striped diplomatic pants, and he has slender, reedlike features and a grace of form which represents the Bond street tailor's ideal. He wears one handkerchief peeping coyly out of the breast pocket of his tapered coat and another in his sleeve, and he has a mannerism when drinking a spot of tea and munching a wafer at the bar in the lobby of the Palace of Peace in Geneva of whipping out his breast pocket handkerchief and whisking the dew and crumbs from his silky-sorrel mustache.

• • • •

THERE are several prowling photographers in the lobby of the Palace of Peace who go around taking wing shots of statesmen in unconventional moments with little indoor cameras. They are always shooting away at Anthony Eden because he is so beautiful and every move is a picture of stylish grace and form. Mr. Eden looks like an actor made up to play the part of a drawing room Englishman, and his whole appearance is a startling violation of the old conventional figure of an Englishman who is rumpled and paunchy and has sacks under his eyes as big as saddlebags.

In a certain way Mr. Eden in the British cabinet corresponds to Mr. Pat Hurley, who was Secretary of War in the ministry of Herbert Hoover. For Mr. Hurley was known as the prettiest statesman who ever sat in an American Cabinet, and Mrs. Hurley is beautiful, too, and they were called a handsome couple in their day in the official set in Washington.

It's unthinkable that any Italian could be mistaken about anything in these days of the race of perfect men under the leadership of a superman, but if they could be guilty of a slight error I would say their mistake lay in assuming that because Mr. Eden is so lovely he is a little short on ability and gumption.

• • • •

FOR Mr. Eden went straight from college into the war to end war at a tender age and was a captain of infantry and won a military cross for valor, and all the literature on him devotes special thought to his quick and violent temper. Nevertheless, although the Italians honor valor in their own people, there is a tendency to undervalue Mr. Eden's courage and to dismiss him on his appearance as a mere errand boy for the British foreign office.

Possibly it was a diplomatic error to send such a man to interview Mussolini, who is more on the rugged side and who has a will and temper of his own. The suggestion is heard in Rome that a more conciliatory man and one less ornate would have made a better impression. But maybe the English didn't want to be conciliatory and picked Mr. Eden because they could rely on him to stand up to anybody.

At any rate, the Italians took to calling him in a patronizing manner "the English charm boy," and the story is told with manifest gusto that Mussolini got his goat by keeping him waiting for half an hour and then tearing into him as though he were just a precocious juvenile.

• • • •

FROM the present state of relations between Italy and England you may judge just how much good it did Italy, England and the world in general.

Mr. Eden's temper and Mussolini's dominant nature met in diplomatic transactions which were intended to avoid trouble, and the present hour finds Italian children taking hate lessons in cold schools and every English sign has the word blocked out on every shop indow in Italy.

There was a Hotel Eden in Rome, and though the hotel existed long before the "charm boy" was born and was named for the well-known garden where woe began, the word "Eden" was hastily eliminated from signs in response to violent popular demand.

This story has no moral for the Italians because they are a race without flaw and with nothing to learn, but if it had a moral it would be:—Never take a man or a sissy because he wears a moustache like a day-old Pekinese pup and carries his an[illegible] chief in his sleeve. He might be Anthony Eden.

The New Philippines

Quezon's Appointment Of American Aids Well Received.

The concluding installment of this survey of Philippine affairs will be published in this space tomorrow.

By Vicente Albano Pacis.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

AMERICA is still the sovereign power in the Philippines, yet its authority has been reduced to the impotency of observation and comment, with the seizure of the customs house as a last resort, if and when the last straw breaks the camel's back. The philosophy of the Commonwealth is that during the next ten years the Filipinos should learn everything there is to learn in self-government and that there is no better way of learning than to try. The Filipinos have been completely given their heads and Uncle Sam may use the reins only if it becomes evident that they intend to jump into a ditch. If they threaten to chuck their bonded indebtedness, then and only then may America step in and act.

The American governors general were potential dictators in every sense. Under the organic act, replaced by the independence law, they could set aside acts of the legislature and, through the pardoning power, the decisions of the courts. Since the process of devolution of authority to the natives started in the legislative and the judiciary, the executive branch became the last vestige of American sovereignty. And the theory was maintained that American authority must be commensurate with American responsibility.

Busted is the theory under the Commonwealth—busted for a purpose. Within the next ten years the Filipinos must either make fools of themselves or set up a new nation with credit to themselves if they are equal to the task. And so that America may be in a position to judge the result of the bold experiment, an American high commissioner with full powers of observation has been introduced. He represents American sovereignty. Of course, during the ten years of the Commonwealth, he will have behind him the American Army and Navy in the Philippines, but practically nothing else. And the Filipino President, even now, is building an army of his own!

IN the previous government—that under the Jones act—American sovereignty, in the Phillippines was represented by an all-powerful chief executive. Behind him was the American Army and Navy, but he was also the commander-in-chief of all insular armed forces, including the Philippine constabulary. He initiated very important legislation. To assist him in the exercise of American sovereignty, the President of the United States appointed the vice governor, the insular auditor, the deputy insular auditor and the justices of the supreme court. And since the governor general made all other important appointments himself, a number of the pivotal officials remained Americans. Among these were the director of education and the director of public works.

With the Commonwealth, both the President of the United States and the American high commissioner have nothing to do directly. They are, for practical purposes, outsiders. All the powers formerly exercised over the Philippine government by the President of the United States and the governor general are now concentrated in the Filipino President. He appoints every appointive official in the government, he wields the power of pardon, he initiates legilsation—and he now lives in Malacanan Palace, the symbol immemorial of supreme power in the islands.

Appearances may, of course, be deceiving. But if the comparative importance of the President and high commissioner may be judged from the fanfare occasioned by their respective inductions into office, the President will steal the entire show. His induction occasioned the expenditure of a quarter of a million pesos and required a 19-gun salute from the American Army; the commissioner's start in office involved practically no expenditure since he took his oath of office before Secretary of War Dern in the presence of most of the Congressional delegation but without noise except the scratching of the pen with which he signed his pledge of loyalty.

• • • •

SINCE then, he has been "exiled" to Baguio, the mountain resort, where he is living temporarily in the summer residence of the President while the federal building in Manila, which will permanently house his establishment, is being rushed to completion. It is reported that both the state and war departments have decreed that the President shall outrank the commissioner, but that some people have raised some doubt as to the propriety of thus subordinating the symbol of America's sovereignty to even the highest representation of insular government. Whatever may be the legal phase of the matter, however, it has been the observed policy of High Commissioner Murphy not to project himself in state occasions. Since the inauguration ceremonies of the Commonwealth, he has not, in fact, appeared publicly.

"I am sorry boys," he tells the newspapermen to whom he has always been cordial when they call on him during the slack hours, "I have no more news to give you. Of course, I shall want to see you now and then—do come around—but I am afraid there will be hardly anything." When he was governor general he used to see the press twice a day. He also happened to be in Manila in his temporary quarters at the Manila Hotel when the China Clipper arrived. But he preferred to view the arrival from among the crowd and did not officially receive the crew.

"My policy," he told the American press delegation on the eve of his leaving Malacanan Palace, "will be one of advice, counsel and representation. We shall interfere as little as possible—and give the Commonwealth officials all the elbow-room contemplated by the law."

• • • •

WHILE the commissioner is thus inclined to retire both from the limelight and from active administration, the President seems intent on making himself a strong chief executive. Aside from all the constitutional powers and authority of the former governor general, which he has assumed in the lump, the President is fast arrogating to himself practical political powers. The political parties have fused and he is their acknowledged leader, thus eliminating any minority which might prove unruly. The speaker of the Assembly, at the President's behest, has been shorn of powers, thus definitely subordinating the legislative branch to the executive. If the business hierarchy which Mr. Quezon has outlined, under which the legislature will give him the money but will leave to him the administration of government-controlled business enterprises, is realized, he will wield a tremendous commercial power and influence.

Insofar as the relationship between the executive and the legislative branches are concerned, the President's statement already quoted with respect to Gen. MacArthur—"I request authority to confer upon Gen. MacArthur and his assistants the rank and emoluments I deem in keeping with their important duties . . ."—reveals the setup. Authority in the lump is being piled up by the President. And yet, for all these maneuvers in practical politics, he has shown the opposite streak in an unexpected direction.

Although the constitution requires natural-born Filipinos for most high positions in the government, thus precluding the appointments of Americans in positions created by the constitution, President Quezon appears to be willing to give reality to Vice President Osmena's prediction that an independent Philippines will avail itself of the services of Americans as much as possible. He has not reappointed the American justices of the Supreme Court and the remaining American directors of bureaus because of the constitutional inhibition, but he is gradually gathering around him a formidable advisory corps of Americans.

• • • •

MacARTHUR, possibly ultimately to receive the rank of department secretary, has been named military adviser. Francis Burton Harrison, former governor general is being groomed for the post of economic counsel. As he originated the government policy of going into business, and as the government is definitely going back into business, his appointment, if made, will be significant. Dr. Heiser, founder of Culion Leper Colony and the bureau of health, is slated for the position of health adviser to the President.

Ever before the advent of the commonwealth, indeed, this voluntary tendency to utilize American technical services had begun to manifest itself. Since 1907 the Philippines have been represented in Congress by resident commissioners. While a number of them had, at one time or another, availed themselves of American experts—publicity men, lobbyists, etc.—it was not until about a year ago that an American was set up extra-legally as general counsel for the Filipino government in Washington and "brains" for the resident commissioners. The first to hold this position is former Senator Harry B. Hawes, senior author of the first independence law, which the Filipinos rejected. From all appearances, his appointment will continue for a few more years.

Though in an extra-legal capacity, Americans will thus continue to furnish the brains of the commonwealth. Some critics have pointed out that the commonwealth is a period during which the Filipinos must show their capacity for self-government and therefore the employment of Americans in an advisory capacity is contrary to this avowed purpose. This is probably a point well taken, yet the desire to enlist American services is not so much an admission of the lack of Filipino talent as the proof that the Philippines mean to continue relying on America for advice and guidance as long as they are allowed to. When Congress or the President of the United States specified or appointed Americans to posts in the Philippines, the Filipinos could only regard the situation as one of imposition and as tantamount to a refusal to acknowledge native capacity. But when a Filipino resident appoints and a Filipino legislature confirms American appointees, it is done in freedom and in a spontaneous spirit of good will.

• • • •

THE independence law which created the commonwealth is generous in its grant of autonomy to the Filipinos, even prior to the complete severance of political relationship. Because of the nature of the commonwealth as a last test of Filipino capacity, it also permits Filipino regimentation under the Filipino president for the crucial trial. The foreign affairs of the islands will continue to be handled completely by the Department of State in Washington, but in purely domestic affairs America has become a mere onlooker.

Under this hands-off policy of the United States and in the name of a new national unity justified by the probationary character of the commonwealth period, the Philippine government is destined to become strongly centralized and, in feature, thoroughly presidential.

The Listening Ear.

SOME years ago I copied an odd passage out of a novel. It must have been one of the last of those novels on the order of Aldous Huxley's "Point Counter Point" and Norman Douglas' "South Wind," in which the action is somewhat forgot in favor of bright and iconoclastic conversation, and it couldn't have been a very important novel because I neglected to record its name and author. Yet the point of the passage was amusing at the time, and is still interesting.

"A musical composer, you know"—this was some character speaking—"must be more than little crack-brained. Consider the great brow of Beethoven, and remember nothing came from it but an ordered and ingenious series of flatly arbitrary signs signifying nothing more than a succession of air waves striking the tympanum of the ear—an organization of mechanical impulses, moreover, which has absolutely no meaning beyond that fancifully and post facto and neurotically assumed by the listener. Consider, too, that apart from that special adeptness he was a boor and a bumpkin, and one wonders indeed what his life was worth.

"Music can mean nothing. If you want a cock to crow or a bee to buzz or a compound articulated Pacific locomotive to release its brakes and chuff off, music can relate the happening. But don't tell me that the fourth movement of a symphony can mean and express the courage and hope and faith which are to help us in life. It's an illusion—a drunken, purblind, tin-horn illusion! The bugle may cry out loud and shrill, but the bugler is just a poor, weak, ornery rascal who tipples, shoots craps, and chases housemaids. The bugle, you know, tells nothing of that, right enough—how in the name of good sense, then, can it tell anything else?

NOW the merit of that passage does not lie on its face. Plainly enough, the author has the cart before the horse—the wonder really is that out of the plain materials of human life should come anything which gives us even the illusion of grandeur, nobility, or loveliness. Several thousand years of listeners have had that illusion in common, a not inconsiderable fact. No, the merit is just this—that a few drippings of acid may well be of value, when human illusion, adulation, opinion becomes, as it were, a bit thick.

And even though the Greeks put music in the front rank of their curriculum, and though ever since then music (aside from bits of Wagner, jazz, and rowdy ballads) has been moral as the day is long, it is just as well to have looked hard at it a moment. You'd feel that necessity after encountering the pervasive sweetness of several recent books on music. You might exclaim something stronger than "a bit thick" after reading a letter from a penitentiary bandmaster, which Mme. Stokowski quotes: "The fact remains: trained musicians do not commit crimes, and men who receive musical training in penal institutions, stay out when released."

It is, our acid author might well have noted, a pretty far cry from the tympanum to social reform.

• • • •

BUT there are books on the table. The serious student of music will turn at once to Karl Nef's "An Outline of the History of Music" (Columbia University Studies in Musicology. No. 1; C. U. Press, $3.50). The author, late professor of musicology at the University of Basel, Switzerland, wrote the work in 1919 with two purposes: to fill it with authority for the student, to make it readable for the layman. Long a standard work in Europe, it now comes in C. F. Pfatteicher's translation for our use. Rich with musical examples, footnote biographies and bibliographies, it will adapt itself to anyone's interest in musical history, and lead him as far as he cares to go.

The amateur who is not so intent on the history of the sonata, but who, rather, would learn how to prick up his ears to the sonata itself, will find robust axioms and able guidance in Oscar Thompson's "How to Understand Music" (Dial Press, $2.75). Mr. Thompson, a musical critic, writes straight for adults of scant musical education, telling them at once how to gain enjoyment from an opera or symphony without bothering to explain to them an augmented fourth or a Phrygian mode. Musicians may scoff, but really you don't have to learn how to mix cadmium and cobalt in order to enjoy a painting. The book, though, tends to be overeloquent.

• • • •

More novel and beguiling is Olga Samaroff Stokowski's "The Layman's Music Book" (Norton, $2.75). Here, to be sure, we begin with scales and tempos, but the structure is raised with such ingenuity and functional logic that we are analyzing fugues before we have time to be awed. For a book based on the ear it is surprisingly eye-minded; there are charts and diagrams galore. Phonograph records are listed as illustrations. Altogether, the amateur can utilize in his own home the very successful methods of Mme. Stokowski's famous Layman's Music Courses in New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

But a special blue ribbon goes to John Mills' "A Fugue in Cycles and Bels" (Van Nostrand, $3), a most unusual book on music. For here a radio and telephonic engineer, whose witty and lucid pen has already pleased us with "Letters of a Radio Engineer to His Son" and "Signals and Speech in Electrical Communication," tells us the role which electricity plays in music today, and is bound increasingly to play tomorrow. He weaves cycles (units of vibration frequency which determine pitch) and bels (units of acoustical power or loudness) into a pattern which explains the whole electrical study of sound. Technical, but deeply fascinating.

Just consider this example of the range and sensitivity of the listening ear—that if a person speaks normally into your ear at a distance of half an inch, you receive 10,000,000,000 times more acoustical power than the ear needs to detect a sound. There's a moral there somewhere.

U. S. Cattlemen Win in Canada Pact, Hull Says

Reply to Senator Costigan Holds Objections Based on Misinformation.

By the Associated Press.

Moving to defend the Canadian trade treaty against the protests of Western cattlemen, Secretary Hull maintained yesterday that the controverted reduction in livestock tariffs "would give them more than they would lose."

The Secretary of State made this assertion in a letter written to Senator Costigan (Democrat), of Colorado, November 26, but made public by the State Department only yesterday. It replied to one by Costigan on November 2, before the Canadian pact was concluded, containing the pleas of Westerners that no reductions be made in the American duty on Canadian cattle.

The trade treaty finally promulgated did contain tariff slashes on Canadian cattle weighing 700 pounds or more, on calves weighing less than 175 pounds and on dairy cows weighing more than 700 pounds. But rigid quota restrictions were applied. That is, these reductions would apply only to a set proportion of such imports.

"Protection Assured."

These restrictions, Hull wrote to Costigan, will "assure the most ample protection to our domestic cattle producers."

"The small concession which we have granted on cattle," he said, "must be considered, if its real significance is to be appreciated, in the broad light of the entire agreement * * * and of the benefits which will derive of this agreement in the shape of hundreds of millions of dollars in increased exports, a large part of which will largely consist of agricultural exports, while the remainder of the increase will be in industrial products, which, through enlarged pay rolls and augmented purchasing power, will inevitably redound to the ultimate benefit of our cattle-raising and farming sections."

Hull contended that objections raised against the agreement "are largely the result of a misunderstanding of the actual facts."

Move Called Prudent.

When these are understood, he predicted, most of the objectors will "agree that we have taken wise, prudent and well-considered action."

The tariff reductions in the treaty were from 3 to 2 cents a pound on cattle over 700 pounds, limited to three-quarters of 1 per cent of the average annual slaughter of cattle in the United States from 1928 to 1932; from 2½ to to 1½ cents a pound on calves under 175 pounds, limited to one-quarter of 1 per cent on the same average of slaughter; and, from 3 to 1½ cents a pound on dairy cows of more than 700 pounds, limited to not more than 20,000 head annually.

Peek Sees President.

Hull's explanation to Costigan of his delay in answering his communication was:

"When your letter was received, the trade agreement with Canada was in the final stages of negotiation. I therefore thought it desirable to await the perfection of the agreement and the publication of its terms in order that I might be in a position to deal fully with the subject on the basis of all the details."

The Secretary's letter was made public a few hours after George N. Peek, one of the treaty's severest critics, had submitted personally to President Roosevelt a condemnatory analysis of the agreement.

Peek, a consistent opponent of the Administration's reciprocal trade program, resigned recently as president of the Export-Import Bank, one of a series of Government posts he has held since the President took office.

On emerging from the White House, he said he had had a "friendly talk" with the President.

listed man from 1898 until 1921 "in peace and in war," Ansell added, agreed he "is a man of the highest character."

Samuel Beach, an assistant United States attorney, described Ives to the jury as "the type of person on whom they could pounce."

Beech declared Ives was "sucked into this proposition."

The prosecution concluded:

"Why a Congressman should want to do this I don't know, but there are some people in this world who always want to get more."

Bailey defended the senior Hoeppel as a man who began life without "any advantages" and rose to "represent a great State in Congress."

Raymond W. Hoeppel, another son of the Congressman, was the final defense witness. He corroborated his father's story that Ives said nothing about having been asked to pay for the appointment when he visited the Congressman's office more than a year ago and resigned his cadetship.

Representative Hoeppel, who Wednesday denied all knowledge of any attempt to sell the appointment to Ives, was cross-examined yesterday. He failed to alter his original story.

Charles Hoeppel was not placed on the witness stand.

Confession Upheld In Sextuple Killings

Stains Declared Proof of Woman's Trial Story.

By the Associated Press.

Port Orchard, Wash., Dec. 12.—Luke S. May, of Seattle, former Idaho criminologist, bolstered Mrs. Peggy Peterson Paulos' signed confession today in the Erlands Point sextuplet-slayings trial.

May testified he found blood stains on the inside of the door to Mrs. Frank Flieder's bedroom, in which she was found stabbed, and on the wall between the door and a closet, in which authorities found the body of Fred Bolcom in March, 1934.

This, Special Prosecutor Ray R. Greenwood said, corroborated Mrs. Paulos' story that she saw Leo Hall, her co-defendant, strike Bolcom near the place May found the stains, and that she saw Hall enter Mrs. Flieder's chamber and return, blood-stained, shortly after.

Six persons were found slain in the house. Mrs. Paulos' confession said the fighting started during a holdup in which she assisted Hall.

'Patents a Racket,' Says Federal Judge

Few Profit From System, Jurist Declares.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 12.—Federal Judge William Clark, of Trenton, N. J., told the Congressional committee on patents today that the United States patent system was a "racket" by which patent attorneys, eager to "get a meal," stirred up litigation which "just makes a monkey out of an inventor."

Judge Clark said his 10 years in Federal patent courts had convinced him that no great number of people could benefit from the patent system as it is now constituted.

"In my own experience," he said, "I have had only one case where the inventor had any interest in the outcome of the proceedings."

Big Bomber in Crash at Air Meet

One of the Army's big bombers flipped over on its nose while taking off in high wind at opening of all-American air maneuvers in Miami yesterday.

Gale Overturns Four Airplanes At Miami Meet

Stegall, Rankin, Take First Place in Lightweight Plane Events.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 12.—In high, gusty winds that upset four ships, sky speedsters of the Nation roared over Miami today to open the city's eighth annual All-American air maneuvers.

A four-passenger cabin ship, an Army bomber, combat plane and the famed "flying flea," built by Ed Nirmaier, of Cincinnati, Ohio, all suffered in the pranky wind. No one was injured. Honors in the day's racing program, curtailed by weather conditions, went to Ben F. Stegall, of Savannah, Ga., and Tex Rankin, of Portland, Ore., and Cincinati.

Stegall pushed his fast Travelair around the 25-mile closed course at 155.190 miles an hour, to win the event for C class, 800-cubic-inch ships, while Rankin's Ryan monoplane outclassed the field to win the 15-mile race for O class, 550-cubic-inch ships, at 104.548 miles an hour.

Crackups started even before the program got underway.

An Army bomber nosed over as 92 ships of the Army's general headquarters' air force roared away to parade, in formation, over Miami. A combat plane tipped up on its propeller on landing.

Nirmaier's 316-pound, two-cylinder Flying Flea, with which he hoped to set records where none existed, landed smoothly before the stands, but ground-looped in turning. Propeller, tail assembly and engine mounting of the tiny ship were damaged.

Meanwhile in midtown Miami a cabin plane owned by Joe Cannon, of New York, piloted by Bill Eddy, overshot the Viking Airport in the high winds, settling in Biscayne Bay. Eddy and a passenger were fished out, the pilot scratched.

Unhampered by the wind, however, were the stunt fliers.

New $1 Bills With Reverse Side Of U.S. Seal Appear Wednesday

The new $1 bill, presenting the reverse side of the Great Seal of the United States for the first time on any money, will appear Wednesday, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., announced yesterday.

An unfinished pyramid, surmounted by an eye in a triangular glory and bearing two Latin mottoes, distinguishes the reverse of the Great Seal. Above the design are the words "Annuit Coeptis." Below, "Novus Ordo Seclorum."

They are, translated, respectively, as "He (God) prospered our endeavors" and "A new order of the ages."

Both the obverse and reverse sides of the Great Seal are reproduced on the back of the new silver certificates, several million of which will be distributed through Federal Reserve Banks.

The face of the bill has been changed only slightly, but its production embodies a new process. Signatures of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Treasurer of the United States, instead of being printed with other portions of the design, are overprinted later from steel dies as the certificates are numbered and sealed.

Girl to Stand Trial In 'Mistake' Killing

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Dec. 12.—Seventeen-year-old Mary Elizabeth Smith was ordered to trial tonight for the "mistake" killing of the 19-year-old husband she feared would cloud her baby's name.

The pretty, auburn-haired girl was declared sane today by Colorado's board of psychiatrists. District Judge Otto Bock promptly directed that she stand trial for first-degree murder.

Her husband, Robert D. Smith, whom she married after a Denver High School courtship, was slain November 23. The young woman told officers she shot him after she had been served with annulment papers.

Perplexed by the legal phraseology of the document, the girl said she thought the action meant "they will take Rodney's name away from him." Rodney is the couple's 8-month-old son.

'Personality' Is Topic.

Personality as a factor in business success will be discussed by W. W. Wheeler, assistant vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., in a talk to the Young Men's Forum at the Central Y. M. C. A., Eighteenth and G streets, at 8:15 o'clock tonight.

Church Merger Of Methodists Held 'Epochal'

Union Supporters Foresee Other Denominations Following Suit.

Plans for union of the three major American Methodist denominations already in their hands, Methodist leaders revealed last night their hope that their projected union would be only the first step in a series of consolidations among the Protestant churches of America.

One denomination after another will seek to consolidate its various divisions, they said, the next few steps constituting a rejoining of churches sundered into North and South divisions of the War Between the States.

Such a merger is already being drafted by the Northern and Southern Presbyterian churches, they added, and both Presbyterian groups have discussed a further merger with the Episcopal denomination.

Yesterday the plan for unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, severed 90 years ago, was revealed for a joint commission on union by its secretary, Dr. Harry E. Woolever.

Under present circumstances, the Methodist union itself, bringing together 8,000,000 Methodist communicants representing perhaps 30,000,000 persons, could not be effected until about 1940. The plan must be ratified by general conferences of the three churches, and, while two conferences will be held next May, the Southern group will not meet until 1938.

Stowe sought to halt his flight from the laboratory.

Deputy Chief Inspector David J. McAuliffe, in charge of the investigation, said a note was found in Koussow's pocket showing clearly he was suffering from a persecution complex.

The note, McAuliffe said, was addressed to Assistant District Attorney William F. O'Rourke and stated that for some time Koussow had wanted to kill several persons who had treated him badly and persecuted him.

Koussow had been employed as a mechanic in the dental laboratory since October, 1931, and before that worked for five years at Cooper Union Institute downtown.

Dr. Rowe and Dr. Wiberg, as well as Dr. Crawford, were graduates of the University of Minnesota School of Dentistry—Dr. Rowe of the class of 1909, becoming associate dean in 1929 after practicing dentistry in the Dakotas and serving as professor of prosthetics at the University of Minnesota.

Hoffman Gets Death Threat In Kidnap Case

Note Warns Governor Not to Intervene in Fate of Hauptmann.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 12.—A threat against the life of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman becau e of his intervention in the Lindbergh kidnaping case was revealed here tonight.

Out of mail bags swollen by the fact that Hoffman revealed he had made a secret visit to Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the death house, came a postcard that warned the Governor to stay out of the case or suffer the consequences. The mailing point of the card was not revealed, nor was it announced whether the card was signed.

The postcard, it was understood, referred to Hauptmann as "that rat," and warned the Governor to let justice take its course.

Execution Date Awaited.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 12 (AP).—A new date for the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted Lindbergh baby killer, will probably be set next week by Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard at Flemington.

Until this is done the defense will take no further action to save the German carpenter from the electric chair, C. Lloyd Fisher, one of his attorneys, said today.

As soon as a new date is fixed, however, the defense is expected to ask the Court of Pardons for clemency.

The United States Supreme Court's denial of Hauptmann's appeal for a review of his trial was officially received here today.

Case Resumes Course.

The case now will take the course, interrupted by the Supreme Court appeal, which would have been followed after the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals on October 9 affirmed the verdict of the eight men and four women who convicted Hauptmann last February.

The clerk of the Court of Errors said all the papers in the case would be sent to the Hunterdon County Court of Oyer and Terminer at Flemington tomorrow. A copy also will be sent to Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who is expected to appear before Trenchard next week to ask for a new date for carrying out the death penalty.

The law provides the court must fix a date not earlier than four and not less than eight weeks from the time the new death warrant is signed. If Justice Trenchard acts next week Hauptmann may die between the week of January 5 and that of February 2.

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, who secretly visited Hauptmann in the death house on the night of October 17, will leave to the Court of Pardons the decision to hear Hauptmann. Should the court decide to hear him, the session will be held in the State prison.

Dawes Bank Loan Attacked in Court

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—Charging $50,000,000 of an $80,000,000 RFC loan to the Central Republic Bank and Trust Co. was advanced illegally, Col. R. R. McCormick today filed answer in Federal Court to the RFC's suit to collect $14,500,000 from stockholders.

Col. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, owned 55 shares of the bank's stock, carrying liability of $5,500 under the law making stockholders liable to creditors for the par value.

The bank, of which Gen. Charles G. Dawes was chairman, obtained the RFC loans, paid depositors and closed in 1932. Gen. Dawes became chairman of a new bank, the City National Bank and Trust Co.

The publisher's answer said the RFC money loaned to the Central Republic actually went to the City National, and asked the RFC account for collateral relinquished by the bank. The answer valued the collateral for the loan at $125,000,000.

Where Edith Maxwell Heard Appeal Denied

Here is the Wise (Va.) Courthouse, where Edith Maxwell wept yesterday as Judge Skeen denied her appeal for a new trial.

ideas of life to this rural community, is confronted with an almost insurmountable object.

Her ideas of woman's emancipation are not well thought of in the place where she was bred, where paternal despotism and tyranny are the accepted order of things.

Her eyes were riveted on Judge Skeen as he extemporaneously gave his opinion on arguments of her counsel and the Commonwealth's attorney.

"The main issue," he said, "is whether this verdict is against the evidence. I have spent time analyzing it, and I am not going to take up the stories of each witness.

"Under our law the jury is the sole judge of the facts. There is no State in the Union where there is less interference with the jury by the judges. The jury judges both the credibility of each witness and the weight to be given to the evidence.

"If there is any conflict in the evidence on a material point, this court's hands are tied. Under the limited powers of this court I find there is evidence to support the verdict."

Evidence Cited.

The evidence cited by Commonwealth Attorney A. M. Vicars to show that the girl had intended to kill her father, Trigg Maxwell, consisted of stories of witnesses that she had threatened to kill her father, while talking with friends at the East Radford Teachers College.

Also, he said, when neighbors heard Maxwell yelling "Oh, Lordy, Lordy!" and went to the Maxwell door, Edith assured them that their presence was not necessary.

The fact that Edith and her mother had burned the father's bloodstained shirt was inference enough, the Commonwealth's attorney said, to show that they were concealing their guilt.

But Edith explained that the shirt was torn off by the father in the fit of temper he displayed in the family quarrel, touched off by her late return from a neighboring town. It was burned because it was in shreds, she said.

All other assignments of error by the defense attorneys were dismissed by the court as having no basis.

Stays in County Jail.

Rather than go to the State's prison at Richmond, Edith prefers to remain the county jail, which is a few miles from her home. She will remain there until her petition for a writ of error is heard by the highest court in the State.

"I want to stay here, where I can be near mama," she said.

Her cell is in the old county jail, where the heating system is poor.

"It's awful cold in the cell," she said, "but I don't mind it because I can be near mama and the children."

As Edith was being led back to her cell a family argument broke out between her brother, Earl, and her uncle, Jim Dotson, who chided her for permitting pictures to be taken.

Anything Brother Says.

"I'll do anything my brother says is all right," she said.

"And a lot he'll help you," her uncle replied.

"You're right, I'll help her and I won't advise her to sign a first-degree murder confession like you did," Earl Maxwell said.

Three hours of legal arguments over finely spun distinctions in the law were brought to a ringing climax by the impassioned appeal of Robert P. Bruce for justice for the mountain girl.

EDITH MAXWELL.

"The prosecution has made mountains out of mole hills. It has tried to make every act of these poor people an indication of guilt," shouted the gray-haired barrister, who has been practicing law in Wise County since 1887.

Struck Her Father.

"Even after this girl struck her father, the witnesses told us she said she feared she had hurt him. Does that indicate that she intended to kill him?

"If she had intended to kill him, wouldn't she have used a gun or a bludgeon and not a comparatively harmless thing like a slipper? Her story is that he had her on the floor pulling her hair when she felt a slipper, the first thing her hand reached, and she hit him three licks with it.

"Even if she didn't let the neighbor into the house who was attracted by the noise, does that indicate guilt? If there is a family squabble you don't tell it around the neighborhood and ask the neighbors in.

"Everyone of them said at first that he hit his head on the meat block; but that was before any of them knew that any of the licks hit by Edith had landed on Maxwell's head."

This assertion was in response to a claim of Vicars that the family had tried to conceal the murder by pretending that the father had fallen on the wooden block."

"Even when he approached her with a butcher knife, we heard her story that she backed away saying 'papa, don't, papa, don't.'"

"For the life or soul of me, I can't figure out any evidence or grounds upon which this jury could have found its verdict.

"This girl," he said, pointing to Edith, "is youthful; but already she is worn and wan. She is at the mercy of this court. I am asking you, in God's name, not to read something into this case that doesn't appear."

As he closed his address, the girl whimpered slightly and hid her head in the sleeve of her brown coat, while her brother, Earl, patted her assuringly on the shoulder. Earl was the only member of the immediate family in court. The mother was taking care of the young children in their home at Pound, Va., where the murder occurred last July.

Tall, gray-haired A. A. Skeen, a former judge of the circuit court, unavailingly sought to convince the court that it had not fully instructed the jury on the lesser offenses, such as second-degree murder and manslaughter, which the jury might have found under the indictment.

hope that I will be cleared. God knows I didn't do it to kill him. I was just trying to defend myself, like everyone else would."

She disappeared through the door of the old jailhouse, apparently very composed, but those who lingered near the door could hear her sobbing.

State Asks U. S. To Help Solve Liggett Slaying

Machine Gun Used in Case Makes It a Federal Crime, Is Claim.

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Dec. 12.—A tell-tale pellet of death—a submachine-gun bullet—swung suspicion back to gangland today in the Walter Liggett assassination.

It served also to revive possibility of Federal Government intervention in the investigation requested by Gov. Floyd B. Olson, Attorney General H. H. Peterson and Chief of Police Frank Forestal.

The Governor and Attorney General telegraphed their plea direct to United States Attorney General Homer Cummings.

Forestal added he was "hampered by circumstances and conditions" in the city Cummings a year ago termed "a poison spot of crime."

Called Federal Offense.

To Washington Forestal sent one of the five bullets that mowed Liggett down before the eyes of his widow and daughter Monday night. Two members of his department said it was fired from a submachine-gun.

Pointing out that use or possession of a machine gun is a Federal offense, Forestal said if Washington tests also found the pellet to be from a machine gun, he expected consideration for his request for Federal assistance.

The announcement regarding the bullet called up anew rumors, backed by an officially expressed belief, that Howard Guilford, victim of a similar slaying more than a year ago, was killed by racketeers. Guilford, also a weekly newspaper publisher, like Liggett, his companion in profession and in death, had fought what they termed "crime syndicates" here. Guilford's slayers have never been apprehended.

As the grand jury pondered the evidence in the Liggett death, three theories were advanced by police investigators as motivating the crime.

They were: That the publisher was killed as reprisal for his editorial assaults on a liquor syndicate; that a gambling and slot machine gang might have inspired his slaying; or that it might have been connected with his trial on a statutory charge involving a minor girl last month. Liggett won acquittal.

Still in police custody was Isadore Blumenfeld whom Mrs. Liggett identified, police said, as the grinning gunman who fired the fatal shots. But police said Blumenfeld's "barber shop" alibi had withstood every check they had made against it.

British Officer Lauds Duce's African Drive

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Cyril Rocke, former military attache of the British embassy at Rome, came to the United States on the liner Rex today and stanchly defended Mussolini's policy in Ethiopia.

"Any European race who would clean up Abyssinia is rendering a service to the rest of the world," he said. "Abyssinia is one of the plague spots of the world," he said.

Col. Rocke, 58, has spent half his life in Asia and Africa.

Clergymen Condemn $55 Wages of WPA

St. Louis, Dec. 12 (AP).—St. Louis clergymen, appointed to investigate the relief situation by the Federation of Churches, today indicated the $55 a month WPA allotment as "inadequate" and "almost debasing" and insisted relief must be "just, respectable and adequate."

The "Federal Government must be urged to continue furnishing relief until there is a marked change in the matter of employment," asserted a report of the social service commission of the church federation distributed to all local ministers.

Montgomery's School Building Work Awarded

Contracts for Additions Are Subject to Approval by the PWA.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Contracts for two Montgomery County school construction projects were awarded yesterday by the county board of education, subject to approval of the Public Works Administration, for inclusion in the $794,000 school program recently approved.

Morrison Brothers, of Bethesda, were low bidders on an addition to the Damascus school with a bid of $26,470, while Bradley C. Karn, of Rockville, was low bidder on an addition to the Rockville school with a bid of $42,867.

The board also approved purchase of a site near the intersection of Georgia avenue and the Brookeville road in Montgomery Hill for a new junior high school at a cost of $2,000 per acre. The tract, owned by W. Huff Wagner, contains approximately 15 acres.

A delegation of citizens from the Germantown community called upon the board to request enlargement of the Germantown school, improvement of the grounds and to discuss the possibility of adding an assembly room for the school. Another delegation called to urge a new building for colored pupils at Wheaton.

Rhees E. Burket, of Linden, was retained to do architectural work on the new addition to Sherwood School in Sandy Spring and announcement was made that applications for similar work on the new junior high school will be considered December 17 at 9 a. m. at the board rooms in Rockville.

The Montgomery County Christian Endeavor Union will celebrate its thirteenth anniversary tonight with a county-wide candle-consecration service at the Montgomery M. P. Church in Clagettsville. Addresses will be made by Miss Lillian Rodenhi, president of the State union; Miss Ethel Poyner, secretary of the State Union, and the Rev. H. C. Burkins, of Clarksville.

"The Community's Part in the Tuberculosis Program," will be discussed by Dr. Harry S. Mustard, of the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and director of the Eastern Health District of Baltimore City, at a meeting of the Montgomery County Council on Social Welfare tonight at the Brooke Farm Tea House in Chevy Chase. Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, will speak on the tuberculosis campaign in Montgomery County. A dinner will be served at 6:45 p. m. preceding the meeting.

Two lots in Brookmont were presented to the Brookmont Civic League yesterday by Royal H. Carlock and W. E. Ferguson and will probably become the site of a new community hall, according to officials of the league.

The league has appointed a committee consisting of Carl Griemel, William F. Dawson, Mrs. Carolyn Cutting, Mrs. Oscar A. Eklund and Arthur A. Blackmon to cooperate with the new Potomac Valley Citizens Association.

Christmas in other lands will be portrayed in a play, "Christmas Eve," which the upper grades of the Woodside School will present tonight at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium. More than 150 children will take part in the scenes, laid in Holland, France and England.

Progressive principles of the Roosevelt Administration were discussed by former Gov. Charles Hillman Brough of Arkansas at an open meeting this week of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Silver Spring. Gov. Brough declared one of the most progressive pieces of legislation enacted during the administration is the social security act. Other highly progressive projects, he said, are the Federal Housing Administration, the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Roosevelt, he asserted, will be remembered as one of our greatest Presidents because of his progressiveness, but the argument used in the campaign for re-election will be improved business conditions rather than this policy. Guests at the meeting included the newly organized Young Women's Democratic Club and State's Attorney James H. Pugh.

The fifrst performance of "Three Wise Fools," a three-act mystery comedy, will be given tonight by the Little Theater of Takoma Park at the Takoma Presbyterian Church hall, Maple and Tulip avenues, at 8 o'clock, sponsored by the Takoma Park Lions Club.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.

With the arrest of seven youths, Arlington County police believe they have stopped a wave of automobile thefts and pilfering of gasoline from automobile tanks.

The seven were brought before Judge B. M. Hedrick in juvenile court yesterday. He ordered six of them held for the grand jury on automobile theft charges.

Judge Hedrick disposed of the gasoline stealing charges. Four of the youths were sentenced to a year at the State farm, with the sentence being held open until February. Another received a six-month sentence, which the judge suspended. Two were not involved.

Police said all the youths were acquaintances.

Miami Flight Delayed By Hawaiian Clipper

Baltimore, Dec. 12 (AP).—Late arrival of upholstery for the Hawaiian Clipper has caused postponement of the giant flying boat's takeoff for Miami, Fla.

Officials of the Glenn L. Martin plant, makers of the plane, said today the ship will not take to the air again until Monday. It originally was scheduled to leave for Miami this week-end and fly from there to the West Coast for use in transpacific airmail and passenger service. The Hawaiian Clipper is a sister ship of the China and Philippine clippers.

Prince Georges Liquor License Put Up to State

Bladensburg Woman, Refused by County, to Have Hearing Today.

A hearing will be held by the Maryland State liquor license board today at 10 a. m. in the Upper Marlboro courthouse on the rejected application of May E. Brogan for an alcoholic beverage permit in Bladensburg.

The Brogan application was refused by the Board of License Commissioners of Prince Georges County following protests from residents of the Edmonston road community, where the Brogan establishment is located. The request called for the "on-sale" of beer, wine and liquor.

It will be the second time since repeal in Maryland that the State board has held a hearing in the county. The previous occasion was the successful appeal of the management of the former Old Colonial Tea House on the rejection by the county board of a liquor license.

Members of the State board are Frank P. Bratten of Baltimore, chairman; W. Clinton McSherry, of Frederick, and L. Franklin Purnell, of Ocean City.

Two liquor licenses were revoked and one suspended by the county board yesterday. The permits taken up were those of Naomi J. Hoile, Oakland, on the Washington-Marlboro pike, beer and light wine, and A. Michael Young, Marlboro pike and Benning road, beer, wine and liquor.

The license of the historic Palo Alto Hotel at Bladensburg, operated by Pearl Grisett, was suspended because of Sunday sale of liquor. The Palo Alto permit was for beer, light wine and liquor.

A permit for the "on-sale" of beer, wine and liquor was granted Edward Smith, of 4009 Perry street, Brentwood, conditional upon installation of a kitchen in the establishmnt and inspection by the board. A delegation of 14 residents appeared before the board in favor of the application, while there were 4 opposed. Robert W. McCullough was spokesman for the applicant, and Bird E. Dolby headed the opposition.

Other licenses approved were those of the Dude Ranch, at Branchville, for "on-sale" of beer; Thomas Boyd, of the Autoville Garage, Berwyn, for "on-sale" of beer, transfer from Carl Stone; and Thomas V. Whalen, of 4211 Rhode Island avenue, Brentwood, for "on-sale" of beer and light wine, transfer from Edward F. Kelly.

Clarendon Is Given State Liquor Store

ABC Board Says Citizens Asked Dispensary.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 12.—Complying with the requests of citizens, the ABC board today announced it would open a liquor store in Clarendon, Arlington County, about December 30.

A. B. Clarke, public relations director of the board, said a number of citizens had said they wished to buy liquor in Virginia, but found it inconvenient to make purchases at the Alexandria store.

The store, the sixty-eighth in the State, will be located at 3131 North Wilson boulevard and will carry a full stock of whiskies, wines and other liquors, Clarke said. The personnel has not been chosen.

City Council Confirms Bids On Sewer Work

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

A recessed meeting of the Alexandria city council was held yesterday to confirm bids for sewer construction work amounting to approximately $50,000, in accordance with the action of a recent council meeting.

The project is for sewers in Timber Branch drive and Braddock, and for a group of miscellaneous small sewers estimated as one project. Work is also to be started on the grounds of the new George Washington High School, and on sidewalks at the new colored school, the Lyles-Crouch Building.

A public hearing for the purpose of considering the tentative budget of Alexandria for the fiscal year of 1936 will be held Friday at 7:30 p. m. in the corporation court room.

Council has been holding conference meetings on the suggested budget, but no definite action can be taken on any city finance without a public hearing, when any taxpayer may voice an opinion on city expenses.

The local committee on the Will Rogers Memorial Fund is asking all interested to visit the rooms of the chamber of commerce this week and contribute to this object, as the drive will close on Saturday next. Boxes are also placed in the local theaters for contributions.

Fire of undetermined origin virtually demolished two frame dwellings, 809 and 811 Wilkes street, yesterday morning. The houses were occupied by Mary Contee and Edward Jones. Fire Chief James M. Duncan stated that, in his opinion, the fire originated in the kitchen of the house occupied by Jones, and quickly spread to the adjoining building.

State Senator John W. Rust and State Delegate Maurice Rosenberg will discuss the social security act at an open meeting of the Central Labor Union to be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Carpenters' Hall, Royal and Prince streets.

The Old Dominion Boat Club of Alexandria has purchased a tract of land on the waterfront just south of the clubhouse. The property was bought from the Fred L. Wager estate, has a frontage of 73 feet on the waterfront and extends approximately 370 feet from the Strand Building line into the river at portwarden line.

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

A FEW notes of interest from Government files: Business under the Federal Housing program has taken a sudden upturn and is now well past the half-billion dollar mark . . . an additional billion or more has been added by the administration's modernization, repair and replacement work . . . all this business has been done by private capital released through banks, trust companies, finance companies, etc.

BAKER.

PWA is functioning ten times as fast in contract writing as it did back in 1933 . . . in recent months PWA has prepared and forwarded to cities throughout the country contract offers to aid in financing construction of approximately 3,800 new local public works projects . . . and for the sixth consecutive month, publicly financed construction work has exceeded the previous month.

Malcolm Kerlin, administrative secretary to Secretary Roper, is the Anchor Club's new president. He was elected at a recent meeting of the Commerce Department's Master Masons, along with Clarence C. Weidemann, vice president; John S. Collins, secretary; Royal G. Best, treasurer, and Albert Davis, sentinel.

Bureau representatives chosen were E. W. Libbey, office of the Secretary; Earl R. Strong, Air Commerce; Charles E. B. Holland, Census; Paul C. Whitney, Coast and Geodetic; Ward T. Bower, Fisheries; Edward G. Balinger, Foreign and Domestic Commerce; Adelbert B. Simons, Lighthouses; Edward V. Benham, Patents; Alva E. Hennage, Shipping Board, and Harold B. Gardner, Standards.

Inspection division of PWA will lead Government pre-holiday festivities tomorrow night with its annual dinner and dance in the National Press Club ballroom. A turkey dinner will be followed by entertainment and dancing. G. E. Gaston (P) is chairman of the arrangements committee.

By the way—did you hear George Beck (F), PWA writers' project editor, on the radio the other night? Pretty good, eh?

The District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employes Unions will hold its December meeting Wednesday night in the local N. F. F. E. auditorium, 710 Fourteenth street northwest. Independent union meetings also will be held next week.

Mrs. Mae S. Crawford has been announced as second prize winner in the National League of Women Voters' Nation-wide slogan contest for Federal employes. Mrs. Crawford's slogan: "Let Ability, Not Politics, Be the Yardstick."

And here's something worthy of note (Mr. Van Duzer, attention):

Fantasy.

A dream there came the other night,
Which on traffic problems shed much light,
Or so I thought while I snored away,
And awoke wtih a smile, for it made me gay.

If cars all day were allowed to park—
Instead of two hours—from dawn to dark
The streets, I dreamed, would be clearer far
Of many a backing, shifting car.

The solution appeared extremeley plain;
Traffic would have an open lane
And flow in a faster, smoother stream;
But then, you know, 'twas but a dream.

F. D. RIMESTER.

Patent Office notes: Richard Spencer, first assistant commissioner of patents, yesterday addressed the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in the PEPCO auditorium . . . that's right, he spoke on patents . . . and Dr. H. Holmes, professor of chemistry at Oberlin College, addressed the patent office examining corps a few hours later . . . seven new roses bloomed this week, and they were promptly patented . . . A Tushin, examiner, and Mrs. Tushin, entertained about 100 friends when they "warmed" their new home on Massachusetts avenue recently.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F, P or C appears after your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary Editor today between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive two tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Duke Ellington and his band and other acts; screen, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy in "Whipsaw") P, Loew's Palace (Dick Powell, Ann Dvorak and Fred Allen in "Thanks A Million.") or C, Loew's Columbia (fourth week of Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone in "Mutiny on the Bounty").

FERA Lodge 139 was celebrating a victory yesterday. They announced that Rosamond E. Richter, president, had been reinstated in the research division of WPA. Miss Richter received dismissal notice two weeks ago. Official charges were "inefficiency and excessive use of the telephone." The union claimed she was let out because of her union activities. A bitter battle followed. A protest meeting was held Monday. And today Miss Richter is back on the job.

Correction.

The paragraph in which election results in Labor Lodge No. 12, A. F. G. E., were chronicled yesterday was changed to read as though they were results of Labor Lodge No. 228's election. Of course Miss Dorothea DeSchweinitz is president of No. 12, and her announced program was for No. 12, and this scrivener regrets the error.

Postlude . . . .

By Ray C. B. Brown

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert of the National Symphony Orchestra conducted by Hans Kindler in Constitution Hall Thursday afternoon. Program: "Funeral" Symphony (Locatelli), Waltzes from "Der Rosenkavalier" (Richard Strauss), Intermezzo from "Goyescas" (Granados), Symphony No. 1 in F minor (Shostakovich).

Whatever the multiple causes may have been for so many empty seats, one is sorry to report that yesterday's audience was not what one would have expected on the occasion of the National Symphony Orchestra's return from its Northern tour, and that too great a number of music-lovers "stared from their absences," as Tacitus put it. Those who refrained from attendance missed not only the opportunity to welcome home the organization which has been acquiring honors for Washington, but also one of the most rewarding concerts of the season.

In thus designating the merits of the program, one renders not to the hors d'oeuvres of Granados and Richard Strauss, but to the two symphonies which constituted the solid fare. With a keen eye for contrast, Dr. Kindler brought into juxtaposition a work of the early eighteenth century, representing the symphonic form in its inchoate stage, and another in which a Russian youngster, the musical heir of masterpieces, tried his hand in his first symphony with the confident verve of a twentieth century radical.

Pietro Locatelli is one of the composers who have suffered from the unaccountable whims of fame. In his own day his virtuosity on the violin eclipsed for the public his ability as a creative writer, and in our time he is noted, if one can call it that, for the few of his etudes and caprices infrequently played by violinists. Yet his "Funeral" symphony is a pioneer work of extraordinary sensitiveness and delicacy of expression.

He wrote it in that state of mind which follows the shock of bereavement, for he had just undergone the unstabilizing experience of losing his wife by death, and into the music he put the tenderness of memory, the grief of irremediable separation, and the consolation that he ultimately found. In the poignant first movement, the violins utter their plaint above the low sobbing of the violoncellos, and the shadow of sorrow falls upon the harmony.

In the expression of mourning there is a touching simplicity and frankness; he opens his heart with the naivete of a bewildered child. Yet there is dignity in his grief and a nobility of mind that meets disaster with courage. The manner in which the mood of depression gradually gives way to a feeling of reconciliation with the inevitable is one of the most remarkable transitions in music. One is not conscious of how it is done, but as the symphony progresses there is a continual lightening of tension until peace is attained at the end. The music tells us that the only analgesic for emotional suffering is spiritual faith.

Faith of a different kind, a credo of human perfectability on the social plane, speaks in the F minor symphony of Dmitri Shostakovich, who was only 19 when he composed it in 1925. In its structure are apparent the faults of immaturity, but in its spirit is the boundless enthusiasm of youth. He has denied all allegiance to the past, but he still clings to the idols of the present. While he goes boldly on his own way, he now and then puts out a hand for steadying support. There is a passage in the middle of the scherzo which leans unmistakably upon Stravinski; one can not escape the definite references to "Petrushka" and to the berceuse in "Zhar Ptitza."

On the Air Today

THE old clock on the mantel had stopped. So I sat down at the radio, turned the switch and waited for the first break which would indicate the hour. It was, I figured, between 12:15 and 12:45 a. m.

In a few seconds, with the heating of the tubes, came a sudden crescendo of agonized, screaming pleadings. "Don't keel me, I'll do anything . . . but not that . . . I geeve you my money . . . $2,000 in the mattress . . ."

The blood-curdling dialog was doubly impressive because I had expected to find a dance band playing at that early morning hour, whatever the station last tuned in.

I was fascinated with the hair-raising awfulness of the script lines. Suddenly it became apparent that the victim was protesting being dumped in a ladle of—liquid steel! And while I was dwelling on this gentle situation as a plot for an air play—the unfortunate gentleman was, in truth, thrown into the white-hot cauldron, with his last earthly screams imposed on the throaty, chuckling observations of his murderers.

The scene faded into a conversation between a steel-mill employe and a visitor, in which it was explained that a man recently had lost his life in a ladle of liquid metal—but the process of fashioning steel rails, bridge girders and so on had not been stopped. The jolly part of it all was (laugh, laugh) that the victim even now was a fragmentary part (ho, ho, ha, ha) of the finished pieces before them.

Again, a transition—and the voices of the three slayers are heard, one week or so later. One, named Sampson, set the plot. He was to be a victim of the slain man through an overwhelming desire to work, to go down to the nearby bridge under construction and work. From that point, the unfortunate mill worker dealt out his revenge.

The manner in which the three assailants died is not appropriate for reporting in a column that is scanned by many at the breakfast table. Let it be said that this attempt to be baldly, deliberately revolting in details—ghastly, shocking in realism—can be reported as notably successful. Finesse and subtleness were eliminated in favor of gory, crude obviousness.

Sometimes the mass radio audience becomes a complete mystery to me. There can be no doubt about it, many persons like this Wednesday night N. B. C. feature. It would not be continued if it did not meet with the approval and pleasure of some listeners.

Yet—many a bell-ringing idea, many a delightful bit of entertainment has been refused with arched eyebrows because it was in bad taste, or too "in the raw" or otherwise deemed offensive to the public mind. Many a capricious alteration has been made in scripts and speeches, by the same authorities who place a stamp of approval on "Lights Out," thus putting a crimp in the author's work and usually aiding the presentation in no way whatever.

"Lights Out," if I got a fair sample, is the most blatent evidence of policy inconsistency coming to my attention in many a day.

It's a red-hot colored show at Bill Levy's Hangar Club these evenings—down thar across the "iron" bridge to Virginny. The work is led by Duke Eglan, with Gypsy West, Sid Sisko and others on the floor. Open all night—with the last sizzling floor show at 3.

Well, its finally arrived. Maybe it's been going on and I haven't seen it—but my Ear-to-the ground Department advises me that now it can be made a matter of record without any danger of contradiction.

A day or two ago a lady—tck! tck! —was sitting big as you please in the Mayflower Lounge—smoking a pipe.

Not a little pipe—femmes-size, mind you, but a man-size pipe, filled to the brim with tobacco, puffing away contentedly.

And how the other ladies seemed to be impressed!

You may be interested, too, in learning that Buddy Harmon and the boys in the Mayflower band believe that "Alone" and "The Music Goes Round and Round" are the two big smash hits on the way now from Tin Pan Alley.

Monday night will be the big night for the amateurs at the La Paree. Every one is invited to see the finalists in the six-week contest Emory Daugherty has been carrying on, and give a big hand to the winner who gets a full week at the La Paree as a headliner. And don't forget—if you have a favorite among the preliminary winners, be on hand and help him win by giving him your applause support. The time is 10:30 p. m. In the meantime, the regular show goes on every night.

Johnny Barnes is being held over at the Madrillon for an indefinite period. I guess that's making a pair of fast-moving feet pay dividends! And the Madrillon announces a new policy—never a minimum or cover now, except Saturdays and holidays. Valencia and Romero are highlighted in the floor show. They're all the way from Buenos Aires. You may be interested in knowing (and I'm sure you will) that Jimmy Bright, of the gittar-playing Brights, is now with the Brusiloffians.

It's the "Parade of the Seasons" at the Lotus this week with Estelle Sloane, acrobatic toe dancer; Ritz and Remo, bolero and jazz fox trot experts, formerly of the Loew circuit; Lasco and Floyd, in a very funny comedy and tap acrobatic number, which they've done for the folks in New York's Hollywood, and, of course, little Judy Ellington, who warbles with Bill Strickland's Capitolians. Just for good measure (they're really the reason the boys drop in) are the ten little ladies of the chorus.

Christmas at the Russian Troika is going to smash some holiday celebration records, according to Helen Hamilton, the Troika's lady, who just put the finishing touches on the plans. Jean Savage has those "Million Dollar Legs" out thar at the Dude Ranch, but my, my, how she does treat them. She twists one around her neck and does all sorts of didoes with the other. Dixie Dyer, mistress of ceremonies, 'lows as how Melissa McLean who plays the accordian on this week's bill plays "Every Steinway" as it were. Peggy Faye adds plenty to the show with her eccentric Spanish shawl and Bolero numbers. Jimmy Staley does the crooning for the ladies.

They're expecting twice the fun, excitement and surprises in tonight's big movie night at the Shoreham as last Friday night, when the innovation was introduced. They do say Rudy Valee will be there and will participate in the festivities. Judging from the crowds that wait for him at the stage door of the National this week—that should be attraction enough! More movie shots will be filmed, and a showing of last week's screen tests will be held. The floor show goes on as usual with dancing by Barnee and the Maxim Lowe Orchestra.

Pete Macias is going to play Santa Claus. Every patron Christmas Eve is urged to bring a toy—even though it may be a second-hand doll—but bring something for the youngsters who aren't looking forward to Christmas with much hope. Ramon and Lee will be on hand to accept the contributions. Things are getting gayer and gayer as the festive Yuletide approaches and Jimmy Nichols and Marty Rubin are singing their very best in keeping with the season. Three Maids and a Mike for the floor entertainment.

'Nativity' Rehearsals Started by Children

Boys and girls of the Children's Community Theater, directed by Helen I. Burton, have started rehearsals for "The Nativity," a Christmas play developed by the children themselves from Bible scenes.

The play, presented by the Community Center Department with the co-operation of the Kiwanis Club, will be given first on December 22, at Roosevelt High School. The audience will be made up of hundreds of Washington's needy children. A second performance, for the benefit of the public, will be given the night of December 23. Admission cards may be obtained next week in the Community Center office in the Franklin Administration Building.

Fossil Discoveries Show Nature Of Earth 20,000,000 Years Ago

Lend Weight to Theory of Land Bridge Between Asia, America.

Fossil leaves, fruits and seeds found in eastern Washington and eastern Idaho lend weight to the theory that there was a land bridge between Asia and North America, millions of years ago, and that the earth had a much warmer climate in its younger days.

Roland W. Brown, Geological Survey paleontologist, is the author of the statement, released yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution. Material he collected is being placed in the Smithsonian's collections.

He believes a fairly uniform vegetation belt extended around most of the earth in the north temperate zone about 20,000,000 years ago. Much significance is attached to his finding leaves and seeds of a species of Spanish cedar, now common in the West Indies, whose wood is used for making cigar boxes.

Discovery of this cedar and variout other fossils in the Northwest would seem to show that part of the globe, if not all of it, was warmer than it is today. Other specimens discovered include seeds of a cone-bearer now found only in the Atlas Mountains of northwestern Africa.

Toy Guns Burned In Crime Crusade

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 11. — A crusade against playthings regarded as accident and crime breeders spread to 60 city schools today, leaving two bushel basketfuls of toy guns burning in its wake.

The blaze marked the end of the first year of a campaign led by Mrs. Rose Durso de Simone, chairman of the group, against what it considers the catering to and whetting of a dangerous appetite in juveniles.

Last year only a few schools contributed to the fire, which destroyed 1,900 toy arms. Since then the movement has received the approval of Superintendent of Education William Bogan, the commendation of boys' judges and the crime prevention bureau, a good word from Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York City, and gathered in so many guns that only a few of the number surrendered were selected for the ceremony of the fire on Ryerson School's playground.

U. S. Sends Radio Man To Ethiopian Capital

William Lee Pitts, naval radio man, has been ordered to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, for service at the emergency radio station established at the American Legation, it was stated yesterday at the Navy Department.

Pitts will replace John L. Cauthen, who has been ordered to return because of poor health. Cauthen, with three other enlisted men, was sent to Addis Ababa in September at the request of the State Department to establish and maintain the emergency station. Cauthen's home is Auburn, Ala. Pitts is from Bristol, Va.

There was a time when the quaint old city of Alexandria, Va., was considered a remote Southern town, with little fraternizing with Washington, other than an occasional pilgrimage on Washington's Birthday or other patriotic occasion. Brazil Envoy Receives In Celebrated Mansion

Recalling Old Days, Society Again Flocks to Historic McCormick Home for First Formal Function of Ambassador and Mme. Aranha.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

For almost a year the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. Aranha have been living in the new embassy on Massachusetts avenue but until yesterday no large functions had taken place there. When the Brazilian envoy first moved in, renovations on the old McCormick house had not been completed. Then Mme. Aranha was ill for several months and the summer came and formal entertaining ceased. So yesterday Mme. Aranha received formally for the first time in the new residence.

The Ambassador and Mme. Aranha have stepped into a setting of grandeur in which Washington social and diplomatic history has been made. The mansion Robert Sanderson McCormick, diplomat and world traveler, built for his wife, Katherine van Etta Medill McCormick, was long the place where Washington society gathered. Embassy Row used to be depopulated when word went around that the McCormicks, reputed to have the finest cellar in Washington, would be glad to receive their friends.

Admiration Abounds.

The late Robert S. McCormick, father of Robert R. McCormick, publisher, and of the late Senator Medill McCormick, husband of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, traveled with his wife through most of the capitals of Europe as a diplomatic agent. He was America's first Ambassador to Austria-Hungary; Ambassador to the Czar from 1902 to 1905, and from then until 1907 was Ambassador to France.

Those travels heightened the tastes and sharpened the eye of the McCormicks for things of beauty, and when they returned to Washington they determined to have a great house.

And this is the house where hundreds of members of Capital society gathered yesterday to admire some of the authentic Napoleonic furniture; pieces that Josephine de Beauharnais had chosen herself when she had the finest craftsmen in the world at her command. The house is decorated throughout in Empire style. Marble Caen stone, oak and crystal have gone into the making of the rooms, and yesterday, the present chatelaine of the mansion received her guests in a small drawing room furnished with needle point chairs and settees. Mme. Aranba wore a frock of changeable taffeta in shades of wine and deep blue.

Envoy Explains Art.

In the large drawing room, the Ambassador greeted other guests, and after explaining to the interested some of the fine paintings in the room, led them through the hall where a huge portrait of the U. S. S. Utah, lying at anchor in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro, dominates the wall. The picture was painted when Herbert Hoover, then President-elect, visited in Brazil.

Assisting Mme. Aranha yesterday were Mrs. Thomas C. Dawson, Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Ecuador; Mme. Lobo, who is visiting at the embassy; Senora de Fuentes, wife of the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, and Mrs. Nathan C. Wyeth.

Guests came and went from 5 until 7 o'clock, all eager to greet the host and hostess and to again attend a party in a house which has such pleasant recollections of good times.

In the large drawing room tiny Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, held a court of her own as she sat on a rose-colored settee with Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Minister of Hungary, and Miss Patten. In the dining room Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, was greeted on all sides by diplomats and officials.

Former Envoy's Widow.

Many guests gathered around Mme. de Lima e Silva, widow of the former Ambassador of Brazil, who has been in Washington for ten days, visiting at the Spanish Embassy. Yesterday she wore a gown of black crepe, with a small black hat from which hung a heavy widow's veil. Mme. de Lima will leave Washington Sunday by plane to spend some time at her home in Mexico, but will return to Washington for another visit in February.

Others there were Mrs. Campbell Prichett, wearing a costume of black velvet with narrow collar and cuffs of old lace, a pert hat of white felt trimmed with pom-poms of Persian lamb, and carrying a muff of the same fur, to which were pinned three deep-purple orchids. With Mrs. Prichett was Mrs. Brinkley Smithers, who, with her husband, has recently come to Washington and is residing at the Senator Gore home in Rock Creek Park, which she has leased for the season.

Also seen were the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, accompanied by Mr. Walshe, Secretary of External Affairs of the Irish Free State, who is in this country with the British-Irish and Canadian Air Mission; the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Guillermo Patterson; the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castilla Najera, the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, the Minister of Iran and Mme. Djalal, the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Boncesco, the Minister of Portugal and Senhora de Bianchi, Mrs. Nathaniel B. Dial, wife of the former Senator from South Carolina, and Capt. and Mrs. Charles C. Hartigan. Mrs. Hartigan, a sister of Kathleen Norris, famous author, has just returned from a trip around the world.

Mme. Aranha will receive again this afternoon from 5 until 7 o'clock.

Jewelry Vogue Is Carried Out In Accessories

Vanity Sets Echo Note of Elegance in Winter Fashions.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE vogue for jewels and more jewels has carried over this season to accessories. One finds gloves with jewel buttons, bags studded with exotically colored stones, be-jeweled evening caps, and even compacts and lipsticks set with rhinestones, emeralds, rubies, diamonds and sapphires.

These vanity sets glistening with jewels are especially thrilling. They echo the note of elegance struck by fashions this winter, and they speak eloquently of luxury in make-up.

One radiant jewel set is in either black or ivory, the black ornamented with simulated diamonds; the white with stones in bright coloring. Compacts can be purchased in either single or double style. The single has a glass mirror and holds a cake of powder. The double is designed for loose powder and has a metal mirror and space behind it for rouge.

Complete Manicure Sets.

AN excellent buy for any one is the attractive manicure case that contains about everything you could possibly need for your nails. Preparations that are known far and wide for their quality too. There's a polish that won't peel off nor streak, a polish remover containing an oil that's beneficial to the skin, an oil for grooming the cuticle, and a splendid cuticle remover. In a little compartment concealed in the bottom of the case there are the manicure utensils, file, orange stick, etc.

The case itself is made of genuine leather and is available in black, green, blue, and red. Not long ago it sold for $2.50, but now for the Yuletide season it's yours for $1.25.

"Mad Money Bags."

SELLING like wildfire in a local store are the "Molyneaux mad money bags." They are pouch style, exquisitely finished, and just the things for casual purses to see you through a formal evening. They're small enough to fit easily into your hand, but sufficiently large for your change, your key, your compact, and lipstick, and hanky.

You have your choice of these in brocade, lame, gold and silver kid at the unbelievable sum of $1.

With inexpensive evening purses such as these you may own more than one, and match your bag to many costumes.

For someone in the dollar bracket on your Christmas list, here's a fine selection.

The Doll Seamstress.

MOTHERS who haven't a knack with the needle and who are dreading the ordeal of dressing the Christmas dolls; and mothers who are planning to surprise little daughter by dressing up her old dollies in brand new costumes—both ought to call upon the doll seamstress for help.

Maybe though they haven't known until now that there was such a person in town. Well, there is, and a very talented one, too. You ought to see the chic coats, and suits, and hats—complete outfits, in fact—that she makes for doll families. And the fluffy garden dress, picture hats, and little lace trimmed panties. They're simply scrumptious things, feather stitched, hand embroidered, and perfect in all details. All you have to do is call her up and she'll come out to see you—and the dolls—and bring some of the tiny outfits with her to give you an idea of her work.

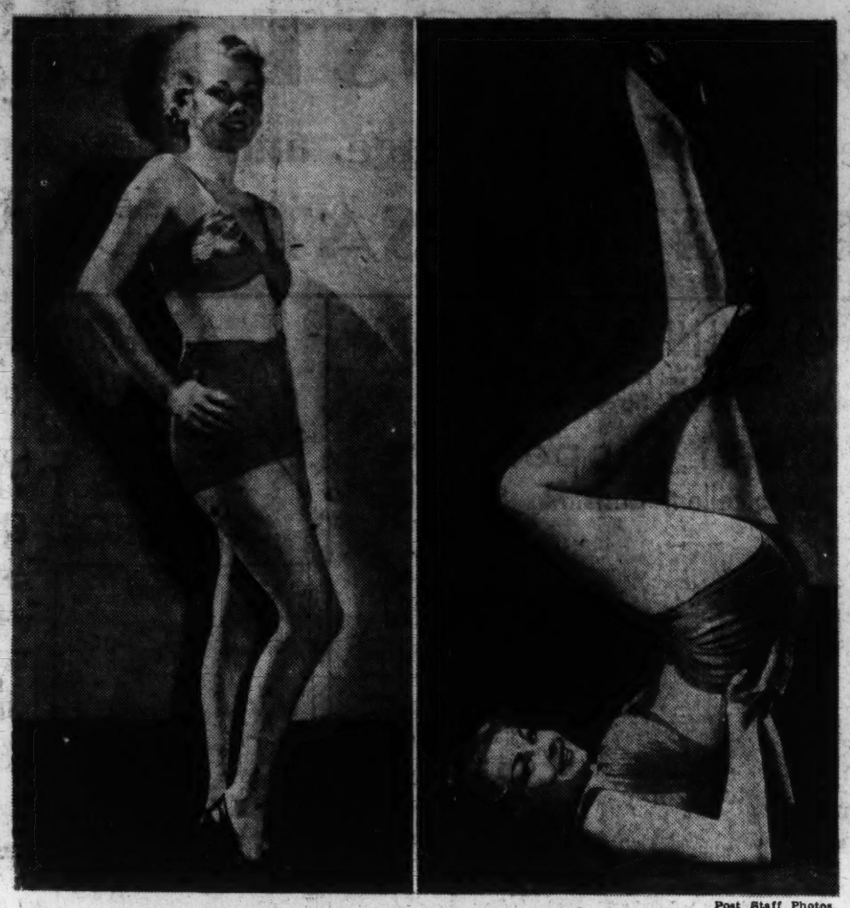
Touch of Fragrance

TO lend its fragrant touch to your clothes closet, why not one of the flower packs sold in the notions department of a large downtown store? These dainty bits of sweetness are compact little bundles of dried blossoms and sweet smelling herbs. You can easly fasten them to a clothes hanger and one or two of them will give your closet the refreshing scent of an old English garden.

You buy the flower packs for as little as two for 25 cents, or large ones for more.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Shows How She Streamlines Her Silhouette



Post Staff Photos.

Claire McQuillen, of George White's current vehicl e, is a few pounds overweight—according to stage standards. To retrieve her former figure she's coun ting her calories and doing a daily exercise routine that includes the "s cissor's" kick (right).

Hefty Chorines of Past Called 'Myth'

Vogue for Streamlined Chorus Is Explained by George White.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

JUST why the bald-headed row changed its taste regarding the size and symmetry of chorus girls has never been explained. In the 90's a girl could have hips and some extra padding here and there and still get by in something besides burlesque. But modern audiences demand that their stage sirens be streamlined and supple.

Yesterday, George White, producer of a series of "Scandals" featuring beautiful girls, gave his explanation of the phenomenon. Excess poundage bowed out with bustles, he said, "because that was when we first discovered a little weight goes a long way. But to tell you the truth, show girls were never so plump as they were supposed to be—that is, except in burlesque, where the notorious 'beef trust' chorus set the pattern."

He pointed out, also, that the famous Florodora sextet was made up of slender girls. "Their costumes were pulled in so tightly at the waist that their hips bulged out in contrast," he said, "but not a single one of the six was fat; no fatter, in fact, that the average girl in my current show."

This introduced a subject the producer obviously likes to talk about. With a little encouragement, he admitted his company contained "75 girls as attractive as any you'll see anywhere in the world. There's not a cough in a whole carload. A swell bunch—if I do say so."

Method of Selection.

How did he select them? What height and weight did he favor? What about age? And experience?

The average height of girls in his show is 5 feet and 7 inches, and the average weight is from 115 to 120 pounds. Some of the dancers are shorter, he said, and must weigh less in proportion. Age? "From 16 to 20, when they begin," he revealed. "I don't like to start training them when they're any older. You can teach a young dog all the tricks, you know. The older ones have their own ideas.

"After entering my company, a girl can last in the business as long as she takes care of herself—her complexion and her figure."

He has no preference between blondes and brunettes, "just so they're pretty," he said. He doesn't demand previous experience. But he does expect each member of the company to "work hard and keep in trim."

"When I see a girl gaining weight I ask her to check up and lose a few pounds. Whether she does it by exercise or diet doesn't concern me, just so she keeps her health. But excess weight has to be shed—and soon."

In this connection he mentioned that one of his girls "had a figure that was almost perfect a few weeks ago. She gained a few pounds—probably not more than 4 or 5—but you've no idea how different she looks. She has already started reducing and will be back to normal weight before long."

The girl in question is Claire McQuillen, whose face has graced numerous advertisements for a well-known cigarette. Discovered in her dressing room a few minutes before time for the curtain last night, Miss McQuillen told of the program she is following to retrieve her former figure.

"Trouble is, I like to eat—too much," she admitted. "I know a sensible diet, proper exercise and plenty of activity are the only secrets for losing weight and keeping fit; but when I'm working hard, I fail to take my daily exercises, eat more than I should and before I know it, I'm overweight. I've already begun taking my daily dozen (and then some), with a vengence. I expect to continue regular exercises and to count my calories until "Almost Perfect" Type Tells How She Stays That Way.

I get back to my original 106 pounds."

She now tips the scale at 110, which wouldn't be so much for her height of 5 feet and 4 inches—if she weren't on the stage. "I'll have those 4 extra pounds off within two weeks," she said. "And this is how . . ."

Her daily exercise routine is a rather strenuous one. First she stands against the wall and with her arms extended above her head, then rises on top-toe and reaches as high as she can, breathing deeply. "I do this about ten times," she said. "It limbers me up, makes me supple."

Next she holds her knees stiff and bends at the waist until the tips of her fingers touch the floor. This is repeated 20 times, "because it's good for slenderizing the waist and hips."

The "scissor's kick" is another of her favorite exercises for hip reduction. It is accomplished in this manner: She lies flat on her back, then thrusts her feet into the air, and while she supports her hips with her arms, she moves her legs rapidly as if she were riding a bicycle. "I keep this up as long as I can—generally two or three minutes," she said.

But exercises won't turn the trick without proper diet, according to Miss McQuillen. "So I've cut my calories down to about 1,200," she explained. "At breakfast, I have a piece of dry toast, coffee and an egg. Or I may have a half grape fruit, toast and coffee. At noon, a clear soup and a salad. At dinner, a small piece of lean meat, vegetables—such as beets, tomatoes and spinach, and some fruit. I 'go easy' on potatoes, desserts, bread and butter. By following this diet rigidly, I can lose about 2 pounds a week and still be well-fed."

Princess Dress Simple to Sew And Attractive

By Laura I. Baldt, A. M.

ISN'T THIS new princess dress just precious? It buttons right down the front, so small daughter can slip into it unaided, which makes her so self-dependent.

Cottons as broadcloth, percale, ginghams, etc., with contrasting color for the collar and sleeve bands, are all excellent for this simple-to-sew model, that's so quickly finished.

This model can also be in velveteen, wool jersey, wool crepe, rayon novelties, etc.

Style No. 2883 is designed for sizes 4, 6 and 8 years.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY'VE been in a great flurry getting ready for holiday company. The living room furniture has just come back from the upholsterer's resplendent in bright new covers. The rug has been cleaned and there's new paper on the walls. And for days she has been going around with a yard stick in one hand and a pencil in the other measuring the windows for new curtains and draperies.

And he has been standing by with a strong right arm and a pair of husky shoulders ready to shift and hoist and pull the furniture here and there till it was just in the right place and settled down for the winter. All in all they've been having a very elegant time.

• • • •

They ended up with the nicest room . . . the new wall paper was in powder blue that looked simply beautiful with their wine red broadloom rug. The sofa was all done up in beige and two easy chairs were in French blue and an extra chair in flowered linen on an ecru ground. At the windows she decided on beige sheer curtains with draperies of the same flowered linen used on one of the chairs. Then they placed the sofa (1) under the windows with end tables (2 and 3) at either arm. The two blue chairs (4 and 5) went nearby and the coffee table (7) in front of the sofa. The flowered chair (6) was turned to face this ensemble, and the piano (9) was placed in the wide corner of the room with a music cabinet (8) on an adjoining wall. Along the left hand wall (10) the book cases went along with a pair of side chairs.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Eleven years ago I married the black sheep of a good family. I didn't know he was the black sheep until too late, although I had met his family before we were married. Six weeks after we were married my husband was arrested for theft of money from his firm and for transporting liquor in a company car, offenses committed before our marriage. He helped himself to our family doctor's car and took it out of the State in an effort to escape arrest. He was convicted and sentenced to a year in the penitentiary for car theft, and his family repaid the stolen money to his firm. After he had served his time I took him back and we lived together about eight months. Six weeks before our child was born he disappeared and for eight years or more I neither saw him nor heard from him. Four years ago I got a divorce.

Eighteen months ago I took a job here in Washington. I was here just four months when I met my ex-husband face to face on the street. He began telephoning me and begging to see me. The first thing I knew I was going with him regularly. A year ago he begged me to marry him again, swearing he loved me and always had; that he was sorry for what he had done, and promising to make amends. To my sorrow, I believed him. He has a good position making $2,900 a year and could so easily have done all he promised. I wanted so much to make a home for our baby that I was willing to take a chance for her sake. Then he was transferred to a distant State and promptly forgot all his promises. Now he doesn't even write; not a line since the first two letters.

• • • •

What I wish to know, Miss Haworth, is this: can he be compelled to help me support our child? Isn't it time he did so? I've carried the burden so long. My salary is small, and after paying my own and my child's living expenses, there's nothing left.

Ideas Offered On Substitutes For Potatoes

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

IN THESE days when buying potatoes requires checking up for the proper Government stamps and prices are rising, housewives are turning to substitutes.

Rice, hominy, macaroni and spaghetti come to mind.

Hominy has been a staple article of diet in the South since the Indians taught the first settlers its use.

Hominy Croquettes With Cheese Sauce

½ cup hominy grits, 1 pint tomato juice, 2 tablespoonfuls of butter, the yolk of one egg, flour, salt and 1 cup of cheese sauce.

Bring to a boil the tomato juice with one half teaspoon of salt. Add the hominy grits and cook in a double boiler 45 minutes. Stir in the butter and egg yolk, and set aside to get cold. Shape into small cylinders; roll in flour and fry in deep hot lard until a golden brown. Drain on warm brown paper and arrange on a hot platter, with a cheese sauce poured over them, and dust with paprika.

Mexican Rice

1 cup rice, one half clove garlic, ¼ small onion, 1 tablespoon lard, 2 small carrots, 1-3 cup green peas, 2 cups boiling water and salt and pepper.

Cut the garlic in two or three slices and fry to a light yellow in the lard. Remove the garlic and put into the hot lard one cup of well-washed rice. Spread evenly over the frying pan and cook until yellow, stirring from the bottom with a wooden spoon. Add boiling water, dice, green peas, salt and pepper, and let all simmer until rice and vegetables are done, scraping the rice from the bottom of the pan from time to time.

There are a multitude of ways in which macaroni and spaghetti may be cooked that add real variety to the simplest of diets.

Set of Shirts Heads the List Of Gift Suggestions for Men

Irish Linen Handkerchiefs Are Both Practical and Popular.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Christmas gifts for men that will call for cheers, and not for jeers, are gifts whose password is "safety first." Smart, practical gifts that will be received with enthusiasm by the men who get them.

A shirt is a fine gift—a set of shirts is excellent. The majority of men like plain white broadcloth shirts with long pointed collars. To vary the set, include a fine striped madras that has blue or white as its basic color. If he's the outdoor type that wears sports clothes, flannel shirts in Scotch plaids and distinct checks are staging a revival.

Handkerchiefs.

A gift of white handkerchiefs may not be very original—but it's practical and popular. The handkerchiefs illustrated are of fine Irish linen with handrolled hems. They have a self striped border and open work monogram.

Tie and handkerchief sets of identical pattern but different materials are gifts many men like.

A safe bet in socks is plain black silk because they look well with practically all suits. Fine lisles are second choice. If you think he'll like patterns—conservative 6 x 3 ribbed socks make good gifts—clocks are tops, but let him choose his own Argyles and checks!

Ties and Scarfs.

Ties make excellent gifts and the safest to give are those in small neat all over patterns because they are the type most men wear. Stripes are next in favor and this season's dark, deep color combinations will be greeted with applause. Solid colors in barathea weaves and silk reps are always good. The majority of men like ties whose basic color is blue.

Most men like to wear scarfs—but notice their overcoats before choosing! Chesterfields call for silk scarfs—or very soft flannel or silk challis. Knitted scarfs and heavy flannels are happier with raglans and ulsters.

Pigskin gloves and string gloves vie for first honors as gifts. Gray pigskin and dark blue string are high style but natural pigskin and white or yellow strings are surer to please.

Robes make swell gifts—self-trimmed or with contrasting lapels, sash and cuffs as illustrated. Flannel for general use. Red or blue bedroom slippers in soft kidskin are good brother gifts.

Braces and Belts.

These make acceptable gifts—especially when boxed in some of the new packages that do double duty as cigarette boxes and game boards. Wood braces in Tartan plaids, constructed to allow for plenty of freedom, for outdoor wear—braces of striped or all over patterned tie silk for business. Pigskin belts with pigskin buckles. Chrome belt buckles of smart modern design.

And here are a few odd gifts, while not on the "safe" side are sure to please. Dress studs, alligator skin wallet, silk pajamas, travel kit or cocktail jacket.

Crawling Found Aid to Stutterers

Hope that stuttering children may be helped by the exercise of crawling is held out as a result of a recent experiment at the Unisity of Michigan. Science, official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, reports that 24 child stutterers studied in the experiment showed a marked improvement in their speech when moving on all-fours.

"When the stutterer assumed this position," the report states, the lack of speech co-ordination decreased."

Prudes Alone Oppose Scanty Garb for Baby

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"SHOCKING! The mothers of those half-naked children ought to be ashamed of themselves!"

A large number of people still object to nakedness in any form, even if it is only the free, half-bare bodies of tiny children. One mother who was watching her babies of 2 and 3 romping on a secluded beach was, on the complaint of a neighbor, asked by the police to clothe her children more modestly and not endanger the public morals by the sight of babies wearing only pants.

Such a point of view is really so prudish as to be salacious, though the person, who holds it will rationalize it in every possible way.

True, it is unwise to run into the face of public prejudice, since the feeling may affect the children and make them self-conscious. As soon as a child becomes aware of his unclothed state—like Adam and Eve after eating of the forbidden fruit—it is high time to cover him with the normal quota of garments.

The longer children can be kept unconscious of their bodies, the better. It does not make for immodesty nor loose morals then or at anytime. The moral tone of any period is set and controlled by public opinion—not the prying comment of salacious minds, but the mores of one's contemporaries.

The general laxity, of which there is so much complaint, is not the result of infantile nudism, but of a change in public opinion. Whether it is good or bad remains to be seen. But no amount of clothing and preaching modesty to babies is apt to affect it one way or another.

16 WPA Jobs Are Approved By Roosevelt

Projects to Give Work to All Eligible Idle in District.

Cost Put at $942,447; Additional Cash Is Expected Later.

Notice of Presidential approval of 16 additional WPA projects, estimated to be enough to supply jobs for all eligible employables remaining on District relief rolls, was received yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen, local relief and works administrator.

The projects are estimated to cost $942,447, but no additional funds accompanied the Presidential approval notice. Allocation of funds must come later after the projects have gone through the hands of the Comptroller General.

Moneys already allotted for WPA work will be used to put the new projects into operation as fast as can be done, so as to supply jobs for eligible employables, especially white-collar men and women workers, Commissioner Allen said.

10,183 Given Jobs.

William C. Cleary, assistant deputy works administrator, announced 10,183 men and women already have been assigned to WPA jobs. Assignment of others is going forward daily, he said. There is a total of 3,899 awaiting assignment.

A total of $5,548,622 has been allotted for District WPA projects. Projects which have passed all the stages of approval are estimated to cost $8,306,753. Either these projects must be cut down by $2,668,131 or more money must be given out of the Federal funds. The projects approved by the President yesterday add to the difference between estimated cost of projects and the amount of money allotted to carry them out.

Dole Return Feared.

Fear that the 10,000 persons now employed on WPA jobs would be back on relief when the WPA program expires in a short time was expressed in a resolution adopted by the American Association of Social Workers and made public by Commissioner Allen.

The association indorsed Commissioner Allen's announcement he would seek an additional $600,000 for local relief for the balance of the current fiscal year and would seek appropriation of $3,200,000 for next year. The estimates before the Budget Bureau provide $1,700,000 for relief. The latter sum, the association said, "is inadequate in view of the reasonably expressed fears that public works projects may be exhausted before the end of the present fiscal year, thus throwing some 10,000 persons now on such projects back on relief."

Commissioner Allen's order restoring the 25 per cent cut in relief payments effective January 1, was praised by the association, which added "we cannot, however, fail to express our regret that the Commissioner did not see his way clear to restore the 25 per cent cut in current relief grants for the month of December, which reduces an average allowance of $1 a day per family to 75 cents a day, this sum to cover both food and shelter."

Projects approved by the President yesterday and their estimated costs were: clerical and library work at the Zoo, $9,852; general repair of the municipal fish market, $39,490; research work by the department of vehicles and traffic, $26,136; preparation of old records and documents of the District morgue, $1,392; study of old records of Gallinger Hospital, $20,880; compiling historical records of old schools, fire houses and police stations, District repair shop, $3,600; rehabilitation of books and records of the public library, $23,844; repair of old land records, recorder of deeds, $4,404; installation of a lot and square index in office of recorder of deeds, $153,869; physical inventory of property of 50 branches of health department, $612; preparing topographic map of Rock Creek Park, by National Capital Park and Planning Commission, $33,926; preparation of base maps for use by park and planning commission, $9,924; organizing and conduction of recreational programs by playgrounds department, $136,680; filing and codifying old records of Board of Education, $268,704; classification of records of veterans by Army Medical Center, $5,400; supplemental project for clearing, grubbing and minor work on highways, $203,740.

Killeen Slayer Bailed; Death Charge Reduced

MRS. LILLIAN MADDOCK.

Mrs. Lillian Callahan Maddock, 36, former narcotics peddler, who shot and killed Edward V. Killeen, the gambler, on the afternoon of November 23, was at liberty on $5,000 bond last night.

She went into the Rockville Police Court for a preliminary hearing yesterday charged with murder, an offense that is not bailable. She emerged with the charge reduced to manslaughter.

Judge Harold Smith, after listening to testimony that pictured Killeen as a gun-brandishing sadist, announced:

"I am satisfied that under no circumstances would a jury convict this defendant of more than manslaughter. Evidence shows that there was a self-defense motive."

State's Attorney James A. Pugh, the prosecutor, agreed to reduce the charge from murder to manslaughter, and Judge Smith set bond at $5,000. Mrs. Maddock's attorneys, Stedman Prescott and Harry Whelan, arranged to have this posted.

The next legal development in the case will come when Pugh asks the Montgomery County grand jury to indict Mrs. Maddock.

Mrs. Maddock did not take the witness stand. Her lawyers, however, introduced her signed confession after Pugh had failed to do so.

In this Mrs. Maddock told of an incident that hitherto had not been made public. She said that Mrs. Florence Killeen, the gambler's widow, called at her Georgetown apartment on one occasion and, finding her out, left a note which said:

"Next time I come here I will blow you to hell."

The star witness for Mrs. Maddock was Mrs. Hannah Edwards, who used to be her housekeeper. Her accounts of Killeen's brutalities had a visible effect on the courtroom crowd.

"Killeen became enraged," Mrs. Edwards said, "tore the clothes from her back, knocked her down and kicked her. Then he cursed her and told her to get out of the apartment. She put on another dress, but he tore that off, too, and kicked her all around the bedroom floor."

Wet and Dry Fight Flares Again in D. C.

Advocates of Prohibition Blame Rising Traffic Toll on Drinking.

Liquor Dealers Attempt New Organization of Their Forces.

Wets and drys returned to the wars last night in Washington, the wets attempting new organization of their forces, and the drys hitting again at the rising traffic problem, which they blame on repeal.

Twelve wets, beer dealers, organized a new Off Sale Beer Dealers Association at the Hamilton Hotel, as their leaders sought to cheer them up by promising future meetings would be better publicized. They resolved to fight for permission to sell beer on Sundays as well as to battle the dry drive to restore absolute prohibition.

The drys held four meetings, attended by about 240 persons in all, and their principal points were these:

1. A recommendation that motorists obtaining license plates be compelled to sign a pledge that they would not drive within six hours after taking a drink of beer or liquor—by J. Raymond Schmidt, United Dry Forces speakers' chairman, at Lincoln Road Methodist Episcopal Church.

Old Testament City.

2. An indorsement of the vigilance committee appointed by the Associated Beverage Dealers in which wets will try to police their own industry—by T. B. Jarvis, former executive secretary of the Citizens Service Association, at Dumbarton Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church. (But Jarvis was sure the wets would not be able to prevent law violations anyway.)

3. A call for an educational campaign to teach youth the virtues of total abstinence—by Harry S. Warner, executive secretary of the Intercollegiate Association for the Study of the Alcohol Problem, at Columbia Heights Christian Church.

4. An assertion that continuance of the fight for prohibition was in harmony with the Old Testament, which said the truth could not be concealed and no question was settled until it was settled in harmony with the truth—by the Rev. Charles H. Butler, retired Lutheran pastor, at the National City Christian Church annex.

Schmidt said his pledge for drivers was the only way to minimize traffic hazards caused by intoxication, other than the alternative of absolute prohibition through the Guyer bill.

The wet meeting at the Hamilton Hotel, organized by Sam Lovenbein, was intended as the first for Class B liquor dealers. Lovenbein said he had circularized the 610 licensees in the District, but had sent out notices only Monday. He said short notice explained the meager attendance.

He said the organization had been incorporated in the District Recorders Office earlier in the week. Last night the following temporary officers were named: Abraham Kay, president; Al Kaufman, treasurer; Lovenbein, secretary and Dave Hornstein, attorney.

Telephone Girl Braves Flames To Send Alarm

20 Others Flee Garage Fire; Deputy Chief's Auto Upsets Virginian's.

Twenty persons fled for their lives early last night as fire swept the Coast-in-Garage at 514-516 Eighth street southeast.

Two alarms were turned in and more than a dozen pieces of fire apparatus poured water on the flames.

The firemen were summoned by Miss Frances Martin, the garage phone operator, who sat by her switchboard while other employes were fleeing the building.

She turned in one alarm, then ran. When fire apparatus failed to arrive as quickly as she thought it should, Miss Martin returned to the flaming building and called again.

Miss Martin, on the verge of nervous collapse, stumbled from the garage as the first contingent of firemen arrived.

More than 2,000 homeward-bound Washingtonians were attracted to the scene. A detail of policemen blocked off the street and held the crowd back.

Witnesses said a sudden flash similar to an explosion preceded the fire. Firemen under the direction of Chief Fire Engineer Charles Schrom and Battalion Chief G. W. Smith quickly brought the blaze under control.

On the way to the fire the automobile of Deputy Chief John Carrington collided with a car operated by George L. Lockhart, of Gainesville, Va., at Ninth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Lockhart's car was overturned, but neither he nor his wife was injured. Carrington, who was being driven by Fireman Ivan G. Beers, continued on to the fire after ascertaining that no one was hurt.

Housing Jobs School Opens Today for 70

Classes to Train Experts for Management of Federal Projects.

800 Sought Admission; Experiment Financed by Private Funds.

A brand new school, with no textbooks, no tuition fees and no professors, will open this morning in the Capital with a student body of 70 hand-picked men and women, potential managers of apartment and community projects of the Public Works Administration and the Rural Resettlement Administration.

The school, first of its kind, is under the direction of Donald Slesinger, head of the National Association of Housing Officials. Funds for its administration have come from the Rockefeller Foundation and other endowed organizations.

While the Government has no connection with the four months' course, the two leading Federal housing agencies, PWA and RRA, have promised preference in appointments to those who complete the training, Slesinger said yesterday.

800 Seek Admission.

Since plans for the school were first announced several weeks ago, more than 800 persons applied for admission. From this number, 70 men and women, white and colored, were selected.

"All of them," explained Slesinger, on leave from the University of Chicago faculty, "were passed upon first by the officials in their own localities, then by the personnel departments of PWA and Rural Resettlements after they had been cleared by our own association."

This double check method was employed, the director of the school said, to insure the suitability of the students for the positions they are seeking.

Few social workers were selected, he pointed out. Most of those chosen have had administrative experience in some line of business. And with few exceptions the 70 admitted to the course already were employed.

Although a job was not one of the requisites for admission, "it seemed, when we got down to the business of selecting, that most of the really promising men and women already had positions," Slesinger explained.

One-fourth Are Women.

About one-fourth of the pupils who registered yesterday for the course are women. A dozen or so out of the entire group are colored.

"That was one of the two things PWA insisted upon," said the school's director. "We must train colored persons to manage the projects set up for colored people. And we must select men and women from the localities where the projects are being established so trained managers can be sent back to their own communities."

In adhering to the plan inhabitants of rural districts have been selected to take the course for managership of Rural Resettlement Administration settlements. The students are about evenly divided between PWA and RRA.

Slash in Gas Rate Schedules Granted Approval of P. U. C.

Lower Consumer Costs Become Effective Monday.

Saving in Annual Bill Expected to Total $851,000.

The four-and-one-half-year battle over gas rates, which has cost approximately $700,000, ended yesterday when the Public Utilities Commission approved the reduced rate schedule and the sliding scale plan for future rate adjustments, offered by the companies by commission counsel and by the people's counsel.

The new rate schedule will cut $851,000 a year from the old gas rates. It will add $305,000 to the annual amount of the 8.5 per cent discount which has been continued in effect by the commission during the last two years by a series of temporary orders.

The new rates are expected to become effective on bills rendered after next Monday, although the companies, when they submitted the new schedules last month, proposed they should become effective December 1.

Delay incident to public hearings on the sliding scale agreements and the new rates prevented earlier approval and Marcy L. Sperry, company president, said it would be impossible to make the reduced rates retroactive without seriously disturbing the business.

Announcement Today.

Formal announcement of the "new deal" in gas company regulation is to be made by the commission this morning after Stoddard M. Stevens, jr., chief of company by the companies of changes in counsel, reports the formal approval wording worked out in closed conferences.

As approved by the commission, the rates and the agreement are substantially the same as proposed. The valuation of the companies was put at the proposed $21,000,000 figure with $750,000 added for working capital during the next year. The basic rate of return was left at 6.5 per cent.

The new plan is the culmination of a proposal by William A. Roberts, people's counsel, made last August 4 that gas rates be reduced $820,000 below existing filed schedule rates and that a new sliding scale agreement for adjustment of rates in the future be worked out to end costly litigation.

One change was made in the rate schedule proposed. That was in the domestic schedule. Under the proposed new schedule 66 cents per 1,000 cubic feet would be charged domestic consumers above 10,000 feet consumption a month. Robert contended a natural "breaking point" was at 8,000 feet and the 66-cent rate should begin there.

It's Friday the 13th All Day— And the Last One of the Year

Every Dog Has Its Day, but This One Is Reserved for Black Cats.

While most persons are in a dither at the prospect of getting through Friday-the-thirteenth without running into bad luck in some form or other, there actually are men and women who look forward to today as a time of good fortune.

Black cats may w their heads off, ladders may straddle every sidewalk and bats may fly all over the place. Still it's a grand, fine day so far as the unsuperstitious minority is concerned.

"If there was anything unlucky about the thirteenth and about Friday, something bad would have happened a long time ago," laughed Ruth Lewis yesterday. Ruth ought to know. She was born 13 years ago today at 13 minutes after 3.

Today her parents, Detective Sergt. Elmer Lewis and Mrs. Lewis, are giving her a birthday party at their home, 4446 Ord street northeast. Thirteen boys and 13 girls have been invited.

Mrs. Lewis said yesterday she wasn't at all dismayed when her only child appeared on December 13.

"If I'd ever been inclined to be superstitious, that would have cured me," she laughed. "I couldn't afford to go around worrying about her all the time just because she was born on a certain day at a certain time."

This is the second time the girl's birthday has fallen on a Friday. The other time was in 1929. She wouldn't care, she said, if it happened that way every year.

For Briscoe Goodhart, December 13 likewise is the luckiest day of the year, particularly when it falls on Friday. It's his birthday. Goodhart lives at 1214 H street northwest, where he also operates a printing business. He was born Friday, December 13, 1907.

According to several attorneys in the Capital, they, too, could use a few more Friday-the-thirteenths in the calendar. They have clients who won't sign leases or business contracts except on the thirteenth. When that date is combined with a Friday, they'll sign almost anything.

'Happy-Go-Lucky' Grandma, Missing 9 Days, Hunted Here

Mrs. Betty Mothershead, 56, described as a "happy-go-lucky" grandmother, was the object of a widespread search by police yesterday.

She left her home, 1114 Fourth street southwest, nine days ago, saying she was going to do her Christmas shopping. That's the last her husband, her five boys, her daughter-in-law and her grandchild saw of her.

They learned that she stopped at the branch of the American Security & Trust Co., Seventh and E streets southwest, and deposited $20 of about $65 she had with her, but there her trail ended.

Mrs. Doris Mothershead, the daughter-in-law, said last night that she felt her mother-in-law had either fallen a victim to amnesia or had met with foul play. When she left home, the daughter-in-law said, she was complaining about a pain in her head and a pain in her heart.

William Mothershead, husband of the missing woman, last night gave The Post the following description of his wife and asked that it be broadcast:

Age, 56; weight, 230, and height, 5 feet 6 inches. She wore a brown hat, black coat, dress and shoes, and brown stockings. She carried a black pocketbook. She wore eyeglasses part of the time. Only one tooth remained in the front of her mouth.

Anyone seeing her should call the Fourth Police Precinct or her home, District 6977.

Jimmy Walker and Wife Add Luster to Arrival of Pat O'Brien in National Capital

Screen Star Is Greeted Here By Huge Crowd

Crowds Gather at Station; Rudy Signs Contract; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

So I dashed out of the office and made for the Earle Theater Building, Washington Post haste, as you might say, to catch the caravan that was going down to the Union Deppo to greet Pat O'Brien, the eminent cinemactor—just to save a few vowels—and got there a second too late.

Whoa was me!

And then who comes prancing up but Bill Ewing with the glad tidings that the Packard had missed me only by an eyelash and was on its way to this citadel of the verities to pick me up, when they espied your reporter risking his life, limb and pursuit of happiness trying to cross the corner of Thirteenth and E streets at a rush hour. It is a good trick even if you can't do it.

And what do you think? I'll have to tell you, because you'll never guess.

There in the back seat were Gracie Barrie, feminine star of George White's "Scandals," tossing them into the aisles this week at the National, and her mother, surrounded by such low characters as Mr. Ewing and Dan Terrell, motion-picture publicists, who stop at nothing to gain their invidious ends—both ends, if you care for details.

During the ride to the deppo Gracie confided that she thinks Washington is a swell town and the critics—hear, hear!—an especially talented group, since she read last Tuesday morning's reviews of her show and her own particular contributions to it.

Both Are Lucky.

The success this talented young woman has achieved, I am happy to report, has not gone to her head. She is the same unaffected kid she was when, as a pinch-hitter, more or less, she stepped into the breach constructed by the defection of Maxine Doyle for a place in the Hollywood spotlight.

Gracie seems to think she is awfully lucky to have the chance she is now enjoying to crash Broadway—meaning Forty-second street and the New Amsterdam Theater—in a big way. She may be right. But Mr. White is a little lucky, too, in having Gracie in there to chant his roundelays as expertly as she does.

In Tuesday morning's paper I put this child up there with Nora Bayes, Sophie Tucker, Maude Raymond, Clarice Vance and a few others of the top "hot" singers we have had in the last half century. I still put her there after having sat through most of last night's performance for a third time. Gracie is tops on any man's stage.

But this is getting a long way away from Pat O'Brien, to whom these remarks set out to be dedicated.

Mr. O'Brien—and I can pay him no higher compliment—is precisely the hail-fellow-well-met off the screen that you have come to admire him, on. The success he has won before the cameras and microphones has gone to his heart rather than to his head.

To be sure, he arrived here yesterday in the questionable company of a gloriously rowdy character by the name of Eddie Sherwood, former Washington film executive and later proprietor of Baltimore's most popular night club, but that should not be held against him. Eddie Sherwood can happen to anybody! And what a swell romp it is, if he does!

Auld Lang Syne Business.

It was just a lot of old pals getting together, if you know what I mean—John J. Payette, Guy Wonders, Eddie Sherwood, Ted Church, Larry Elliott, Betty Hynes, Eddie Melcher, Don Craig, Mabelle Jennings, who had Pat on the air almost before he got his hat off; the radio editors, Lillian Cutlip, et al., and a few others who slightly cramped the ample Shoreham suite in which the rout was cedebrated.

But if you really want to know something about this O'Brien fellow, you had better ask him.

As nearly as I could gather in the general melee, he is about 5 feet 10 or 11 inches tall, has a receding crop of dark hair, a genial Irish smile, more weight than you'd think from the celluloids and a gorgeous sense of humor. The guy is always clowning.

Old Stock Player.

It was not so many years ago that he was playing in stock in Baltimore with Frank McHugh, Edna Hibbard, Bill Boyd and a few others of note and often wondered what he was going to use for money in the more or less conventional business of paying off the landlady. Sometimes the landlady didn't get paid. Those were the frequent occasions upon which she was running neck and neck with the actors. They didn't get paid, either.

As nearly as I could gather, Pat at something like 8 o'clock last evening, had not the slightest idea what his act today would be.

I only had one idea on the matter myself and that was that the act, whatever its nature, would be good. Pat is like that. You care for him in a large way whether he does anything or not.

The chances are today that he will do something—in which case you will care for him more than ever.

So let's leave it at that.

Merry Christmas!

Like our own upper Fourteenth street, Hollywood boulevard has become "Santa Claus Lane" for the time being.

Along its length the biggest and the least important of film stars plan their Christmas gift giving—if any—and plot what jocundities they can perpetrate upon those innocently serious fellows and their gals who take Christmas at what seems to be its face value.

It is with come chagrin that one notes that Sybil Jason, a brilliant young actress of 7, has asked Santa Claus for a flatiron, a washboard, a basin, a small cookstove, a playhouse and—with an enviable lack of professional jealousy—a Shirley Temple doll.

The diminutive Juanita Quigley puts in a slightly heavier order. She wants a set of Dionne dolls!

Little Virginia Weidler, having three dogs, two cats, two rabbits, two canaries, two finches and two lovebirds, now only wants a pony and another dog—if it can be arranged.

What cannot be arranged in Hollywood, even if it is merely a matter of taking on a pet shop?

Don't ask me; I'm asking you.

Honest Confession Note.

There have been complaints of late that "punning is the lowest form of wit." As if I didn't know! But what are you going to do for a last line?

I'll bite, too. So write your own—and then send me the recipe.

Two Stopped a Minute and One Got Off

Here we have, left to right, Pat O'Brien, the former Betty Compton, now Mrs. James J. Walker, and Jimmy Walker, himself, snapped at Union Station yesterday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Walker, recently repatriated after three years in England, were on their way to Georgia for a little shooting. Pat O'Brien alighted from the Seaboard Air Line's "Orange Blossom Special" for a week of personal appearances at the Earle Theater, beginning today. They are all three nice people and all members of this club.

Jimmie Walker And Wife Make A Brief Visit

Former New York Mayor and Missus Pause While Train Catches Breath.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Unheralded, unexpected and unannounced, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Walker, the former Mayor of New York City and his wife, the former Betty Compton of stage and screen renown, made a brief pause in Washington yesterday afternoon on their way to a season of early winter shooting in Georgia.

Alighting from the Seaboard Air Line's "Orange Blossom Special" at Union Station at 4:50 p. m., for a breath of air and a brief stretch of the legs, the recently repatriated "playboy mayor" and his wife ran smack into a considerable group of ladies and gentlemen of the press, pacing the cellar platform in anticipation of the arrival in the National Capital of Pat O'Brien, booked for a week of personal appearances at the Earle Theater, beginning today.

They all got off together. Mr. O'Brien, surrounded by a huge stack of luggage, Mr. and Mrs. Walker principally occupied by the tugging at the leash of a spiffy little Irish terrier that had ideas of his own about where to go and when.

Recalled the Old Days.

Jimmie recalled with a wistful sort of nostalgic pleasure the days of his intimacy with a former owner of this admirable family journal and was able to call back to mind the junket he made to this city in the early days of the Harding Administration as chief legal counsel for the national organization of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, of which Sidney Cohen at that time was president.

A group of us visited the White House on that occasion to invite the President to open the annual Sanhedrin in the Washington Hotel. Jimmie recalled the occasion yesterday, but could not name the year. Neither could I. It must have been about 1922 or '23.

Mrs. Walker was radiantly beautiful and appeared younger than I have ever seen her. Jimmy plainly showed the strain of his period of self-imposed expatriation and betrayed a need of recuperative exercise in the open that the hunting trip to Georgia ought to launch with salutary effect.

Their chief concern, as Pat O'Brien and his entourage pulled away for a social bout at the Shoreham, seemed to be that the frisky little Irish terrier might break his leash and become lost in the crowd that naturally gravitates to such a group of celebrities.

Up to the time I bid them au revoir, if not goodby, the pooch was still under control. But I had to shake hands with the dog instead of his master, he was struggling that hard.

However, Betty had a free hand—so what?

Maxwell Attorney Out for Congress

Robert P. Bruce Will Seek Ninth District's Seat.

By the Associated Press.

Wise, Va., Dec. 12.—Robert P. Bruce, former Wise County Commonwealth attorney and former State Senator from Wise and Dickenson Counties, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Fighting Ninth" Virginia District. He will oppose John W. Flannagan, jr., incumbent, at the district convention next spring.

Robert P. Bruce is one of the attorneys defending Edith Maxwell, the Wise County mountain girl, whose motion for a new trial on conviction for killing her father was denied yesterday. He joined the staff of defense attorneys 24 hours before the former school teacher went to trial several weeks ago.

Divorce Granted Millicent Rogers

Oil Heiress Said Argentine Husband Was Cruel.

By the Associated Press.

Reno, Nev., Dec. 12.—Eight years of marriage were ended in as many minutes here today for the former Millicent Rogers, Standard Oil heiress.

The daughter of the late Henry Huddleston Rogers 2d was granted a divorce from her wealthy Argentine husband, Arturo de Peralta-Ramos, by District Judge Thomas F. Moran after attorneys presented depositions supporting her charge of extreme cruelty. Details were kept secret.

Judge Moran ratified a separation agreement dated last October 21 which also fixed custody of their two children.

The couple were married at Southampton, Long Island, November 7, 1927, shortly after she was divorced from Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten.

Exemption of Hospitals From Jobless Law Asked

Hospitals and charity institutions should be given the same exemption from the District unemployment compensation law as is given them under the Federal law, Commissioner George E. Allen said yesterday.

The question was raised when representatives of such institutions protested against proposals to levy assessments on them for contributions to the compensation fund. The question will have to be threshed out by the compensation commission at its next meeting.

Liberal View Held Dominant in U. S.

Adult Education Institute Hears W. S. Culbertson.

Liberal and conservative viewpoints were taken apart and examined last night by William S. Culbertson, former United States Ambassador to Chile.

He found the liberal viewpoint overshadowing the Nation's history and its constitutional experience and the conservative outlook failing to take changing economic and social conditions into consideration.

Culbertson spoke to a meeting of the National Institute of Adult Education. He is chairman of the advisory committee.

The institute, an organization for the promotion of adult study, last night installed the Dante Society, the fourth education group to be organized in Washington.

About 300 persons attended the meeting, including the 45 members of the new group.

Dr. James Brown Scott, secretary of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, spoke on "Dante."

Scouts' Jamboree To Be Here in 1937

Earlier Announcement of 1936 Date an Error.

The Boy Scout Jamboree, called off last summer by fears of an infantile paralysis epidemic, will be held in Washington in the summer of 1937, Curtis Hodges, executive director of the Greater National Capital Committee, announced last night.

An earlier announcement from Boy Scout headquarters in New York City, placing the jamboree in 1936, was in error, Hodges said. The jamboree, which will bring to the Capital thousands of boys from every section of the United States and many foreign countries, will be held here late in June or early in July, according to Hodges.

President Roosevelt canceled last year's jamboree upon the advice of District health officers and officials of the United States Public Health Service, who feared spread of a poliomyelitis epidemic in Virginia.

Citizens Protest Street Widening

Brief Filed in D. C. Court Attacks Board Action.

A memorandum brief and argument against the petition of the District Commissioners for condemnation proceedings for the widening of Blair road northwest between Peabody and Underwood streets was filed in District Supreme Court yesterday by L. Robinson Maddox, representing the Manor Park Citizens Association.

In this brief it was stated that the petition of the Commissioners is "fatally defective" and should be dismissed. In the event that the court upholds the petition, it stated, there should be a hearing either by the court or by a jury on the question, "Have the Commissioners abused their discretion and is there a reasonable necessity for the widening of Blair road?"

The association charges that the proposed widening of the street "is in the interest of private parties solely."

Four Dodgers Are Traded To Braves

Lopez, Cuccinello, Reis and Benge Exchanged for Moore, Brandt.

Quinn, New Boston Boss, Transacts Fine Deal, Experts Agree.

By the Associated Press

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Bob Quinn, a shrewd old grandpappy, who is rated as one of the slickest traders in baseball, gave the major league player mart a final thrill today by trading two hired hands to Brooklyn for the price of four.

Back at Boston, this time with the task of rebuilding the downtrodden Braves, Quinn pulled a deal with his old Dodger confederates whereby he sent Outfielder Randy Moore and Pitcher Ed (Dutch) Brandt to Brooklyn in exchange for Catcher Al Lopez, Second Baseman Tony Cuccinello and Pitchers Ray Benge and Bob Reis. The deal surprised baseball men, who were unanimous that Quinn had made the finest straight deal of the lively three-day meeting that closed today.

Outtalks Rickey.

Up at dawn the 64-year-old Boston president hunted up the Brooklyn delegation and closed the big deal. He then outtalked Branch Rickey, head of the St. Louis Cardinal farm system, but rebelled when Rickey demanded Pitcher Fred Frankhouse in exchange for Infielder Charlie Gilbert. Unable to get more, the conference—long and stormy—ended "no deal."

"I'm just starting," Grandpa Quinn said. "Yes, I figure the Braves got a right smart bargain today."

In the absence of other deals, although the Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Nationals still tried to get together on the Curt Davis-Chuck Klein swap and the Chicago White Sox attempted to get Outfielder Sam West, other important news concerned the joint meeting of the major leagues with Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis. It was voted to adopt the four intersectional series plan, prohibit Sunday doubleheaders until June 15, and reject the plea for $20,000 from the Amateur Baseball Congress for the Olympic games. The refusal to aid the congress was regarded everywhere as a direct slap at the Olympic games in Berlin.

As the meeting closed, 10 of the 16 major league clubs had reported one or more deals. The ones which failed to turn one were Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Chicago in the Nationals; St. Louis and Washington in the American.

The Boston Red Sox announced the largest with the purchase of Jimmie Foxx and John Marcum from the Athletics for players and cash. It was estimated that Tom Yawkey, multi-millionaire owner of the Red Sox, has spent more than $3,000 a day in baseball since he acquired the team three years ago.

Real Improvement.

Three of the sorest spots on the Braves team, which set a losing record last season by dropping 114 games, were figured wiped out in today's two for four deal. Brandt, now 30, had several good years with the Braves, but no longer is rated as a Class 1 hurler. Moore, also 30, has never been a great hitter, averaging around the .282 mark. The biggest surprise of the entire deal was the acquisition of Lopez, now 27, and a leading catcher for six years. Cuccinello, 28, was with Cincinnati before going to Brooklyn in 1932. His lifetime average is around the .300 mark. Reis, 25, was converted from an infielder to a pitcher last season, winning three and losing two games. Benge, 33 years old, once was rated as one of the finest moundsmen. He won nine and lost nine for Brooklyn last season, but had great years with Philadelphia.

Flint Rhem, one of the pitching greats for the Cardinals in their world championship year, 1926, was sold by Boston to Nashville.

Chicago, Dec. 12 (AP).—Tommy Thevenow, a jack of all trades in the Pittsburgh Pirates' infield for the past five seasons, was sold today to the Cincinnati Reds for an unnamed sum.

The deal was closed after the annual major league meeting ended.

Eligibility Dispute Looms at Session

Disqualification of 47 members of the Howard University squad early in the grid season appear likely to have a repercussion today at Charlotte, N. C., when members of the Colored Intercollegiate Association gather to name the colored collegiate football champions of the East.

Strict application of eligibility rules, it was stated yesterday by members of the conference representing Howard, will be demanded of all constituent institutions, as was demanded of Howard last year when all games in which Perkins had played were declared forfeit. Simpson, Morgan College back, of the current champions, hailing from Baltimore, likely will prove the bone of contention.

Should he be found ineligible, Morgan will lose the championship, as all games of the year will be forfeited. The title, in such case, would be awarded Hampton Institute. It is considered likely that modification of conference rules will be demanded to enable Howard and Lincoln to play teams such as Morehouse and Wilberforce which do not maintain membership therein.

Paolino Uzcudun (left) and Joe Louis (right) both wear large smiles on the eve of their 15-round battle at Madison Square Garden tonight. Somebody will have no reason to smile after the bout. The experts are almost unanimously predicting that Paolino will wear a sadder and more scarred expression.

G. W. Defeated By Ohio State Five, 36-27

Special Dispatch to The Post.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 12.—Playing a fast-breaking and accurate-passing game, the Ohio State basketball team turned back George Washington University here tonight, 36 to 27. It was the first game of the season for the Bucks.

Ohio started off with a bang and rang up six points before the visitors had hardly touched the ball. Hal Kiesel, lanky center, then sent in enough counters to tie the score. From then until half time it was nip and tuck.

The Bucks would take a 2-point lead only to have the visitors come back and tie it up again. Only once during the game did George Washington hold a lead, and that was in the middle of the first half with the score 12 to 10. Ohio State got going and led, 17 to 14, at the end of the first session.

Still holding their collective breath, 4,726 Ohio State fans saw the Bucks continue the stellar play and go ahead, 21 to 14, as the last period started. The visitors kept plugging along and, with Kiesel stopped cold in the second half, had quite a time breaking through the Ohio State defense.

Beaten on 3 Western Jaunts, Pitt Seeks Victory Over U.S.C.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 12.—Pittsburgh's football team, usually successful in other climes, proposes to end its losing streak in California Saturday.

Irked by three defeats in as many Western jaunts since 1928, Coach Jock Sutherland is setting the stage for what he hopes will be a thundering song of revenge, with downtrodden Southern California on the receiving end.

Coach Sutherland first brought Pitt West for a Rose Bowl encounter with Stanford and saw his team lose, 7 to 6. It was a hard, defensive battle, with each team scoring in the third period on fumbles. The margin of victory was Bill Hoffman's kick for point after the invaders had failed to do so.

Strangely enough, this was Stanford's lone triumph in the New Year's intersectional classic, although the Indians have made five other appearances.

Pitt came back two years later to tackle the Trojans, who completed passes all over the premises and handed the Panthers a 47-to-14 trouncing, the most one-sided ever written into Rose Bowl history.

The crowning insult came from these same Southern Californians in 1933, when they set up another scoring mark at Pittsburgh's expense with a 35-to-0 shellacking.

So it is small wonder that Coach Sutherland is planning what he hopes will be a touchdown-studded gridiron victory to take back home this season.

There is one drawback to the whole setup. That is the fact that almost everyone has beaten Troy this year, and, should Coach Howard Jones' eleven suddenly become fascinated by the thought of wrecking the plans by turning the tables, it would be a bitter pill indeed.

Notre Dame Head Asks Real Apology

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 12.—The Rev. John F. O'Hara, president of Notre Dame University, said today he was not satisfied with the qualified apology Prof. George Owen made for his charge Notre Dame and other football players were "paid hirelings."

Prof. Owen, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, yesterday apologized to President O'Hara "if any statement of mine is untrue."

Today President O'Hara wired Prof. Owen in part as follows: "Please clarify your position by unqualified disavowal or withdrawal of any statement you have made derogatory to Notre Dame University or its coaching staff. The alternative is that proposed in my previous telegram, namely proof of alleged accusations."

The match went 16 innings.

Brown Bomber Makes His Garden Debut in 26th Pro Bout.

Some Believe Basque's Style Will Puzzle Detroit Negro.

By Bill McCormick.
A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Joe Louis, the Midnight Express, and Paolino Uzcudun, a slow local, will collide in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night to determine what happens when an irresistible force meets an immovable body.

Large and tempting wagering odds are being offered that the immovable body, in the person of Paolino, will give way before the irresistible force embodied in the punching muscles of the 21-year-old Detroit Negro.

The heavyweight encounter which marks the debut of Louis at the Garden is scheduled for 15 rounds, but the Brown Bomber never has been carried to that distance by any opponent and practically nobody believes Uzcudun will extend him to the limit.

Louis himself predicts he will knock out the venerable Basque, who is 15 years his senior, by or before the sixth round, an opinion generally shared by close observers of affairs fistic.

Paolino's Style Puzzling.

A few see in the contest more than just a test of Joe's ability to hand it out and Paolino's capacity for absorbing punishment. Pointing out that in his long career Uzcudun never has even been on the canvas, let alone been knocked out, these few believe the Basque's style will bewilder Louis no end, making more of a contest than generally is expected.

Paolino's nightmarish style of fisticuffing has puzzled more than one good fighter in the past. He was the last man to defeat Max Baer before the erstwhile Livermore Larruper won the heavyweight championship and just recently gave Max Schmeling considerable trouble.

Uzcudun fights in a crouch somewhat comparable to that employed by Natie Brown, who went 10 rounds against Louis, and he bobs and weaves constantly—a business that worries Joe Louis in the ring, if anything can worry him. The

Nats-Indians 8-Man Deal Looms, Report

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Silver-thatched Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington club, and his suave young lieutenant, Manager Bucky Harris, today departed the scene of the major league trading sessions with no deals in hand but with seeds in potential trades scattered in their wake.

"I am far from discouraged," declared Griffith. "It has been my experience during 35 years of these meetings that deals that fail at the sessions develop after the owners and managers return home and start reflecting again on the advantages they might have missed.

"Some of the Washington club's most important trades have taken place after the trading sessions have broken up. When some of these owners and managers we have propositioned return home and start mulling what we have offered I think something will develop. I will be surprised if we do not make at least two deals."

Boston and New York.

Pinned down, Griffith declared that Washington's greatest trading posibilities lie in the direction of Boston and New York.

Griffith refused to confirm a report partly verified in Cleveland that he had broached to Manager Steve O'Neill of the Indians a deal that would involve four Washington and four Cleveland players in an even swap.

The deal, as outlined by sources close to the Cleveland club, would comprise the shipment of Outfielder Heinie Manush, Pitcher Earl Whitehill, Catcher Cliff Bolton and Shortstop Red Kress to Cleveland in exchange for Shortstop Roy Hughes, Catcher Frankie Pytlak, Pitchers Jim Gleeson and either Pitchers Orel Hildebrand or Willie Hudlin.

Would Aid Both Clubs.

The trade, which looms as a logical deal that would benefit both clubs, was scoffed at by Griffith, but Cleveland sources declared that the proposition had been broached by Washington and was being held up only by the insistence that Griffith include Ossie Bluege in the group to go to the Indians.

As an alternative, according to Cleveland sources, the Indians would consider a straight swap of Catcher Frankie Pytlak for Catcher Cliff Bolton.

From the Yankees Griffith hopes to acquire a pitcher in exchange for Heinie Manush. The Yankees for two days refused to deal for Manush except on a cash basis which Griffith refused to consider, but the New York club is expected to counter with an offer that would include one of their better young pitchers.

The Nats' owner stuck to his guns again today in denying that he was jesting when he placed a $500,000 price tag on Buddy Myer when propositioned by Col. Ruppert, Yankee owner. According to Griffith, Ruppert asked only if he would accept "a little less."

With the Yankees facing a loss of patronage and desperate as a result of the bolstering of the Red Sox and Tigers, Griffith declared that Ruppert was in a mood to make him "a staggering offer" for Myer and include Lazzeri in the deal.

Griffith conferred long and secretly with Owner Tom Yawkey and General Manager Eddie Collins of the Red Sox today. Reports have

2 Trainers Suspended, 7 Horses Barred at Charles Town

Stimulating Is Charged To Pair

Jones and Pomeroy Are Affected; Feature to Rolling Along.

By Walter Haight,

A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 12.—Two trainers were suspended and seven horses barred today after the State chemist reported positive findings following saliva tests on two winners here. The trainers are Harry Jones and B. Pomeroy. Jones is held responsible for the stimulating of the horse Keswick, winner here on December 9, and Jones was charged with the same breach of rules in regard to Highdry, which won a purse on the same date.

The cases of both men have been referred to the West Virginia racing commission. Each of the trainers had horses entered for today and they were ordered withdrawn.

The other horses barred were The Bard, trained by Jones, and Luna Mica, Grand Pa's Boy, Donee and Coal, trained by Pomeroy. These horses will be under suspension until other trainers, approved by the stewards, are employed.

First Cases Since Fall.

These are the first cases of stimulation since the late fall meeting began, despite the fact that track officials have ordered saliva tests of the winner of each race.

The day's official announcements also included the suspension of Jockey Joe Cowley. His offense was "cutting over too sharply with Foggy Dawn at the start of the fourth race." He will be absent for the remainder of the meeting.

The feature race brought a surprise victory by Rolling Along, a daughter of Constitution, which paid an $18.60 mutuel. Jockey J. Brooks sent Rolling Along away from the post in good fashion, rated his mount off the pace set by Loch London, took command nearing the stretch and then held his opposition safe thereafter. Loch London lasted to take second money and Fairio, the favorite, closed some ground to be third.

Jockey Eddie Smith, of Washington, was shaken up and had to cancel his remaining mounts when thrown by Nature's Dream as the field lined up for the fourth race.

The daily double paid $20.60 after Miss Patches and Tell It, a pair of favorites, had filled the key position.

Louis and Uzcudun To Battle Tonight

Basque is in perhaps the very best condition a 36-year-old veteran can achieve for a contest and, should the bout go past the tenth round, that condition might tell the tale.

A capacity crowd of more than 20,000 is expected to jam the Garden for the engagement and the gross gate receipts are expected to reach the $100,000 mark, a figure that has not been reached for an indoor boxfight since the Golden Era presided over by the late Tex Rickard.

The main bout will start about 10 p. m., Eastern Standard Time. There will be no broadcast of the proceedings.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BILLOWY WAVE, $5.80, $3.20, $2.80; RED LABEL, $3.40, $2.60; LODOROUS, $3.60.

BILLOWY WAVE moved up fast on the inside when reaching the back stretch, went to the pacemaker rapidly, took an easy lead leaving the back stretch and opened up at will during the closing stages. RED LABEL had good speed to move into an easy lead after rounding the first turn, but flattened out fast when challenged. LODOROUS bettered her position on the outside and closed gamely. OGLE went in the first flight and had no excuses. MISS CYLLENE was held safe. JORDAN ROSE had speed in the first half mile, then tired. MISS SYMPHONY was done early.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $350; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:07. Off at 2:10½. Winner, Mrs. I. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS PATCHES, $5.60, $3.40, $2.80; RUNANSTAY, $10.20, $6.00; BRIGHT GIRL, $4.60.

MISS PATCHES, badly outrun for the first half mile, worked her way up stoutly to reach contention, swung to the outside of RUNANSTAY when nearing the home stretch, took an easy lead and drew out rapidly. RUNANSTAY raced CRESCENT MOON into submission in the first five furlongs, moved clear at the final bend, but was no match for the winner when challenged. BRIGHT GIRL, well up early, dropped back at the last turn but continued willingly to outstay the others. BRIGHT SKIRT was a numerous factor. CRESCENT MOON was used up early and she stopped badly when the final test came. FIND ME could not untrack herself in the footing.

THIRD RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $350; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:38. Off at 2:38½. Winner, Mrs. A. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TELL IT, $2.80, $3.40, $2.80; RUNNING WATER, $4.80, $3.80; MANUAL, $15.80.

TELL IT sprinted into an easy lead at once, was rated while saving ground, then held sway when shaken up during the last three-sixteenths. RUNNING WATER, steadied within striking distance of the leaders, responded to punishment when placed to drive and closed gamely. MANUAL raced forward to field on with good energy for the final test. REPEAL was steered wide in the last five-sixteenths but rallied strongly under punishment. RIVER ROSE outstayed tiring horses. CARNIVAL was unable to reach contention. HURDY GURDY had no excuses.

DAILY DOUBLE (SECOND AND THIRD RACES) PAID $20.60.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $350; claiming. For 3 and 4-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:09. Off at 3:11. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNT ADRIN, $2.80, $2.40, $2.40; FOGGY DAWN, $4.00, $3.00; SIEMPRE, $4.60.

COUNT ADRIN moved into an easy lead after displacing SKIMALONG at the turn into the back stretch, raced stoutly thereafter and held sway to the end. FOGGY DAWN worked his way up gradually after six furlongs but could not threaten the winner. SIEMPRE bettered his position steadily in the last half mile but could not engage the first two. BUNKY closed a good gap. MISS ALPHONSO did not settle in stride at any stage. NATURE'S DREAM could not menace. SKIMALONG stopped to a walk after six furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Berkeley. For 2-year olds. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:40½. Winner, D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROLLING ALONG, $18.60, $6.20, $3.00; LOCH LONDON, $3.60, $2.60; FAIRIO, $2.40.

ROLLING ALONG, with up from the start, assumed command on the far turn and drew out under strong urging. LOCH LONDON had good speed to set the pace, gave way to the challenge of the winner, but held on well. FAIRIO, permitted to drop far back in the early stages, lost ground when taken to the outside and was weakly handled throughout. MAGIC GIFT had no excuses. KATHLEEN F. stopped. MY CARD trailed throughout. SALLANDRY wheeled after the start.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $350; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:06½. Winner, Manuel and Dunaway's br. h. (5), by Flying Bondsman—Frances. Trained by C. Wade. Value to winner, $230; second, $65; third, $35; fourth, $20. Time, 0:26 2-5, 0:53, 1:20 1-5, 1:49, 1:56 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COAT TAILS, $7.20, $3.40, $3.00; MARGE, $2.80, $2.40; VERDA, $3.00.

COAT TAILS reserved, back of the leaders for the first six furlongs, moved up readily to wear the pacemaker down at the stretch turn, then under mild ursing came out strongly nearing the finish. MARGE sprinted into an easy lead and went along smoothly while clear but failed to rally when placed to runningmate. VERDA, slow to get into her best stride, finished courageously after circling her field. JUST REMEMBER weakened after making his effort in the last half mile. POST BRIGADE was unable to threaten seriously. CANTERWOOD weakened early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $350; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:35½. Winner, Mrs. J. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN PLAY, $38.00, $17.40, $10.40; BARNEY SEXTON, $25.00, $15.20; THE WORKER, $4.40.

GOLDEN PLAY, close up from the beginning, responded to strong urging when the final drive came and closing determinedly on the outside was up in the closing strides. BARNEY SEXTON, a keen factor in the early racing, took command after six furlongs, met strong efforts from LATIVICH, then fought it out resolutely in the final drive. THE WORKER went to the outside in the last half mile and closed full of run. LATIVICH was hurried to the front, handled his weight well but could not keep in the deeper footing through the final stages. LUKE CONNELL could not reach contention. VENNIE H. was hard ridden and raced well. ONLY FOOLIN stopped.

Mr. Charles Town

T. C. BRADLEY,

a Kentuckian, is the man who put the Charles Town track on the racing map. The steward, representing the West Virginia Racing Commission, Bradley became the czar of the sport there with the start of the last summer meeting. His firm, but fair ruling has made him popular with customers, horsemen and fellow officials. What's more, the track began to show a profit with his arrival.

Georgetown Swamps Western Maryland in Opener, 46 to 13

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Dec. 12.

CLARK GRIFFITH, who introduced the fad for boy managers and the hair-trigger squawk against all umpires into the big leagues, today installed weighing-in ceremonies on his Washington ball club.

POVICH.

Alarmed by the growing waistlines of the blubber boys on his Washington pitching staff, to which he directly attributes a loss in pitching effectiveness, Griffith has drawn up new-model contracts for the 1936 season which he has demanded that at least two of his players sign.

The weighing-in ceremonies, formerly identified chiefly with the prize ring and mannequin employment agencies, will invade the big leagues in the cases of Ed Linke and Irving Hadley, whom Griffith has indicated as the two most horrible examples of plumpness in pitchers.

Young Linke, potential star of the Washington mound staff, was hounded throughout last season by Griffith in an effort to curb his gastronomic failings and diet himself into playing condition. With contract time drawing near, and Griffith in Chicago, Linke's home town, for the annual baseball meetings, Linke presented himself to the Washington club owner in an effort to display his physical fitness.

Sans his rosy cheeks, a drawn look on his face, and his girth appreciably reduced, Linke today proudly boasted to Griffith that he was 10 pounds below the 205 that was his pitching weight last year. Griffith looked and listented approvingly, but as a safeguard proffered Linke a contract that included a clause by which Linke forfeited his salary on the day he failed to weigh in at less than 190 pounds.

By dint of much persuasion, Linke boosted the figure to 195 pounds. Griffith finally accepted on that basis, and Linke signed. Griffith accused the young pitcher of starving himself for 10 days in order to impress him with his comparative leanness and cautioned Linke that the start of the training season, when he would be eating at the ball club's expense instead of his own, would not be a good time to forget his rigid diet.

Hadley, whose battle against surplus weight has been just as intensive and just as futile as Linke's during the last few seasons, also has drawn down the wrath of Griffith, who visions him as a 50 per cent more effective pitcher if he adheres to training. Hadley's 1936 contract, too, will include the weight clause. On every day that Hadley fails to weigh in at 190 pounds or less, he will lose his salary for that day.

Griffith is thus improving on the technique of Shylock in demanding his pounds of flesh. Portia won the court battle for her client against Shylock when she pointed out no blood could be spilled. Griffith has placed the burden of divesting flesh directly on his pitchers, who must devise their own means of making it a bloodless operation.

Now it can be told. The Foxx-to-Boston deal originated at Fenway Park one afternoon last August when the Athletics were visiting Boston for a series with the Red Sox. Connie Mack was invited into conference with Owner Tom Yawkey of the Boston club two hours before the day's game and emerged with an expression that betrayed no hint of the colossal purchase that had been agreed upon.

But one highly observing and sharp-eared baseball writer was not long in gaining an inkling that something had happened.

As Mack made his way into the field during fielding practice he was seen to call in Outfielder Lou Finney from near the center field fence.

"Get a first baseman's glove and start working around the bag." Mack ordered Finney. Thus the first suspicion of the outside world was directed toward the Boston purchase of First Baseman Foxx.

After the game that day, Yawkey was heard to remark as he left the park, "Where's Jimmy Foxx? Has he left yet?" Told that Foxx had gone, Yawkey incautiously said, "Oh, well, never mind, I'll be seeing a lot of him later."

It was not long after that that Yawkey, in Philadelphia, began to inquire among his friends as to the personal habits of Johnny Marcum, Eric McNair and Roger Cramer. Thus it developed that he was also interested in this trio and the announcement that McNair and Cramer will follow Foxx and Marcum to Boston will come as no surprise.

Trade Talk.

Jimmy Dykes, White Sox manager, was besieged throughout the meeting by former Washington pitchers seeking jobs . . . Bob Burke, who had a nine-year tryout with the Nats before he was released to Albany, is confident he can buy his release from Joe Cambria and stay in the big leagues with the White Sox . . . Al Thomas, on the retired list of the Orioles, also wants a job with Dykes . . . The luckless Boston Braves didn't get a break at the meeting here . . . On the day they proudly announced their franchise was intact, the Red Sox stole the headlines in Boston with the announcement of the Foxx-Marcum deal . . . Jim Gleeson, the New Orleans outfielder, whom the Indians may trade to Washington, is regarded as a potential star . . . Cleveland signed him direct from college with the understanding that he was to get a $5,000 bonus if he made good in the big leagues . . . He led the Southern Association in runs driven in and batted .320 . . . The new rule prohibiting first basemen from using the new-fangled basket mitts popularized by Hank Greenberg, Zeke Bonura, Jimmy Foxx and Lou Gehrig, was introduced by Eddie Collins . . . The Browns, in turning down Cleveland's offer of $60,000 cash for Catcher Rollie Hemsley, thus refused a profit of $52,200 on the deal . . . The Browns gained Hemsley from the Reds at the waiver price of $7,500 three years ago.

Gene Sarazen, in Slump, Goes To Wheeler for Golf Lessons

EVERY golf star falls into a slump, and discovers that it's time to take a few lessons and get his swing straightened out.

Gene Sarazen, who has won all the big titles that are to be won, including the British, American, Canadian and P. G. A. championships, spent several days in Pinehurst, N. C., recently for the express purpose of having his original mentor, Archie Wheeler, smooth out the rough spots in his game.

Not that Gene needs lessons, but he plays hunches—and maybe the few pointers from the cronie of the late Walter J. Travis is one of 'em. Also he is badly in need of a big championship.

Fact is Wheeler was the first to give Gene some expert advice when the Italian ace began his glamorous career at the Brooklawn Club in Connecticut some 16 years ago.

"When I get a little bit off," Sarazen said, "Wheeler can tell me in a minute what I'm doing wrong."

Thus, according to reports from Pinehurst, Sarazen and Wheeler spent several hours on the now famous "maniac hill," practice grounds at Pinehurst, last week.

Sunday Sarazen played a round with Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, five-time women's national champion; Ted Turner, professional, and shot a 38-35—73, finishing 3-4-2-4.

Even the best go to their friends for advice and instructions. Henry Picard, famous Hershey, Pa., professional, is reported to have spent 10 days with Alex Morrison, having his swing altered. Roland Mackenzie tuned up for the Open this year under the watchful eye of Fred McLeod, his first teacher, and everyone knows that Lawson Little attributes his success to some expert instruction from Tommy Armour.

DAVE HERMAN.

Nolan Leads Attack With 11 Points

Hoya Five Runs Up 21-6 Score at Half Time; Frosh Win, 32-14.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

HERALDED as one of the most powerful teams to wear the Blue and Gray in recent years, Georgetown's 1935-36 quintet lived up to advance notices last night at Tech High School, where it bowled over Western Maryland, 46-13, in a rough fray, for its first victory of the season.

More than 2,000 fans saw the Hoyas amass a 21-6 lead in the first half and then finish with an unerring barrage of buckets in the final period to achieve the most impressive opening-game victory any Georgetown team has scored in a decade.

Ably directed by Tommy Nolan, former Gonzaga and Eastern High School ace, whose 11 points topped the scoring, the Hilltoppers experienced little difficulty in working the ball in close for snowbirds. But the excitement, and accompanying nervousness of opening night, caused them to miss innumerable easy shots.

Get Tap-Off.

It was a strange sight, too, to see "Leviticus" Petroskey getting the jump on the tap-off for Georgetown. Not within the memory of the oldest inhabitants have the Hoyas controlled the center jump. Still cumbersome and unpolished, Petroskey played a bang-up game, literally speaking, under the backboard, where he was comfortably at home grabbing stray balls off the backboard.

Georgetown's cutting on set plays was no less than spectacular at times and the team always followed the ball well, although the expected opening-game blemishes marred their efforts to some extent. Tommy Keating, the coolest man on the floor, contributed several nice field goals to the cause, and Ben Zola's air-tight guarding and the all-around work of Don Gibeau also were important factors in the victory.

In a preliminary game the Georgetown freshmen walloped Western High School, 37-14, after leading by a 22-5 count at half-time.

Nats and Indians May Swap 8 Men

it that the Nats' owner, convinced that Roger Cramer will soon go to the Boston club in a completion of the Foxx deal, is eager to acquire Outfielder Roy Johnson from the Red Sox in a deal that may send either Manush or Pitcher Jack Russell or both to Boston.

Johnson is the type of right-handed hitter Griffith is in hopes of adding to the Washington outfield.

Griffith admitted today he had made an offer for Outfielder Julius Solters of the Browns with Outfielder Fred Schulte and a sum of cash to go to St. Louis, but declared that Hornsby had placed a preposterous price on Solters.

The projected Washington-Chicago deal collapsed when Griffith and Harris refused to trade Earl Whitehill for Pitcher Les Tietje.

The former world's heavyweight wrestling champion, as portrayed by Ed Browning, gets thrown for a loss by the current Hungarian champion, as portrayed by Sandor Szabo, last night at Mr. Joe Turner's Cozy Inn for Ye Mat Fan. Browning eventually won.

Szabo Thrown By Browning in 37 Mins.

By George Considine.

GENTLEMAN JIM BROWNING, former world wrestling champion, was anything but a gentleman last night at Promoter Joe Turner's Arena, where he disported himself quite bodaciously while subduing the rassle wrath of Handsome Sandor Szabo, Hungarian titleholder. Nearly 2,000 spectators sat in on the proceedings.

The slam-bang struggle, which consumed 37 minutes, was concluded when Szabo, suffering from a paralyzed arm, acquired on one of his several excursions into the press box, was forced to nod affirmatively to Referee Bennah Bortnick's query, "Give up?" The match was considered by ringsiders to have been the roughest seen here in several years.

Quickly warming to their tasks, the boys produced action from the first grunt. So bristling were the first five minutes that Browning looking sort of glassy-eyed, sauntered over and clamped a sizzling leglock on the referee, while Szabo joined the guffaws of the customers. It really was very funny.

Mayhem Starts Again.

However, the business of unmitigated mayhem soon started anew, both men inflicting much punishment. If points were earned in the grapple game, the score would have been deadlocked every groaning inch of the way. There were toeholds, leglocks, strangles, airplane scissors and everything else. The boys tossed each other in and out of the ring.

It was on one of these exchanges of blows in the second row ringside when Szabo fell on his arm. When he returned to the ring Browning grabbed that arm and twisted it with such punishing vigor that the Hungarian decided that he would rather keep the arm. He drew a deep breath and said "Sandor gives up." And that was that.

In the scheduled 45-minute semi-final, Dean Detton rallied from the throes of almost certain defeat to airplane-spin Barefoot George Mainich into oblivion in 20½ minutes. As an exhibition of the fine art of wrestling the match far overshadowed the main event.

Although Referee Bortnick teamed up with Doug Wycoff, former Georgia Tech grid star, Chief Chewaki was far too foul for both of them. The heap bad Injun was declared the winnah for some unaccountable reason in 17½ minutes.

King Kong Kashey and Harry Kent labored to a well-booed 30-minute draw in the curtain-raiser.

Sam Mosby, 68, Golf Pioneer, Dies Here

Member Washington C. C. for Last 20 Years; Rites Tomorrow.

GOLF lost a friend yesterday morning when Sam Mosby, 68, beloved member of Washington Golf and Country Club, succumbed to pneumonia after a four-day illness at Emergency Hospital.

One of the pioneer golfers in Washington, Mr. Mosby had been a member of Washington Golf and Country Club for the last 20 years. He had been an active player up until a few years ago, when he cast aside his pet woods and irons to play the role of No. 1 spectator and observer.

He was the old standby at the club and knew his golf from A to Z, seldom missing a tournament at the course. Among his legion of friends were Dr. Calvert E. Buck, president of the club; A. G. Rice, general secretary for year; Dr. J. T. McLenahan, Al and George Howard, Dr. Tom Webb, sr., Ed T. Brook, Jimmy Corcoran, Dorey Gruver and Calvert Dickey.

Human Interest Stories.

His human interest stories on golf always held the boys in the locker room spellbound. Even in the coldest weather, Mr. Mosby would occupy his customary seat on the bench in front of the golf shop to greet the boys ambling off the eighteenth green.

Always he was the man the vanquished would console with in their tales of woe—sliced shots into brooks and woods that cost matches, and putts that hung on the lip.

Mr. Mosby, for 30 years with the Weather Bureau, will be accorded full military funeral service tomorrow at 10 a. m. at Fort Myer chapel. A brother, David L. Mosby, of Granite City, Ill., and two sisters survive.

Educators Take Radical Steps Against College Pros—Report

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 12.—The Times-Dispatch tonight says that presidents of institutions holding membership in the Southern Conference adopted at their meeting here tonight certain resolutions which, if adopted in toto by that body, "may cause a Nation-wide upheaval in college athletics."

Foremost of these resolutions, the paper says, were:

1. Absolute prohibition of any member of the coaching staff or athletic department offering special inducements to athletes, financial or otherwise.

2. Full publicity in college publications of all financial aid, jobs and otherwise, received by an athlete.

3. Making the athletic director and coaches personally responsible for all affidavits or certificates of eligibility signed by an athlete.

The meeting here was a closed affair, no outsiders being admitted to the deliberations. The Times-Dispatch said it learned, however, that these and other resolutions with "teeth" in them were adopted and will be presented to the conference for adoption Saturday morning.

This, the paper adds, is "virtually assured" in that the presidents themselves represent the nominal voting powers of the conference.

Described as the first "unified" and "direct" attempt of college presidents to do something about the subsidization evil, and with Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, as the guiding force, the meeting here was an outgrowth of that of National Association of State University Presidents in Washington recently, at which resolutions aimed directly at proselyting of college athletes were adopted unanimously.

Visiting presidents were asked to have these resolutions adopted in their respective athletic conferences wherever possible.

While not entirely new, the movement is significant in that it marks the first time in which college presidents themselves have taken an active hand in the matter. Hitherto, they have left enforcement of rules previously adopted along this line to their various athletic departments.

4-Round Bouts On Card Here Monday

To speed up action, the entire preliminary card to the Bob Wilson-Phil Furr 15-round District welterweight championship bout at Turner's Arena next Monday night will consist of four-round bouts. There will be five such in all, the idea being that the average preliminary performer is incapable of going at top speed for more than a quartet of rounds.

Pike Muskogee, the Baltimore deaf mute, and Tony Livingston, Marine middleweight, have been rematched in a very promising bout. Muskogee won on a foul the last time these two tangled, but only after both had been bounced to the canvas.

Bank Reserves Pass 6 Billions To New Record

$59,000,000 Is Added in Week to 10-Billion Gold Holdings.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve banks' weekly condition statement showed yesterday that, aided by a fresh inflow of gold, member bank reserve balances passed the $6,000,000,000 mark during the week ended December 11.

Balances rose $135,000,000 during the period to establish a new peak of $6,040,000,000, a total calculated by the board to be $3,310,000,000 in excess of the amount required by law.

The sharp upturn was made possible through additions of $59,000,000 in gold during the week, together with a re-transfer of Treasury cash and deposits with the regional institution, which apparently found its way back to Reserve banks. Gold stocks reached a record total of $10,068,000,000.

The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended December 11, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,480,000,000, an increase of $5,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $8,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On December 11, total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,474,000,000, an increase of $4,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $135,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $5,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, offset in part by increases of $59,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $5,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency and decreases of $2,000,000 in money in circulation and $68,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks. Member bank reserve balances on December 11 were estimated to be approximately $3,310,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

The Market

A Special Correspondent

Silver and Other Mining Shares Continue Weak; Francs Are Higher.

New York, Dec. 12.—Stock trading volume held above the 2,000,000-share mark, but the pressure on spirits placed by the silver uncertainty, a railroad receivership, the hitch in Italian peace negotiations, and reported selling from abroad kept prices unsettled. At the close a little ground was lost on balance, while bonds were neglected. May wheat rose ⅜ of a cent to 95⅜ cents a bushel.

Financial markets were still to some extent under the influence of silver. Overnight developments failed to clear up much of anything, although the general silence on the part of the Treasury and the statements of the silver Senators, illogical though they were, quieted fears (or stifled hopes) in some quarters that the Government might abandon its silver purchasing altogether. In lieu of that a new rumor spread and it drew the comment that it could not be put outside the limits of possibility. It was that the Treasury, in order to discomfit silver speculators, to make more difficult China's efforts to maintain a paper currency tied to sterling and to pour more swill into the silverite trough here, would cease buying silver abroad in any quantity and would jack up the domestic price.

By putting up silver to $1.29, that is, removing the seniorage, which would leave it at that price to the producer, or by devaluing the silver dollar to correspond with the gold dollar devaluation, the domestic silver producers naturally would obtain all they possibly could hope for, Senators Thomas, Pitman and their friends would give the Treasury a rest, the country would in the long run save money as against the present policy of mopping up all the metal in the world and the internal economy of China would be relieved.

Imaginary Peak.

Even Thomas and Pitman must now recognize the impossibility of lifting the world price of silver to $1.29, or of securing enough of the metal to equal a quarter of our gold stock—the two ostensible objects of the silver purchase act. The real purpose of the act was, as even the obtuse must now know, to give a big handout to a handful of Western silver miners and other speculators, the doing of which, an agricultural bloc in Congress seemed to suppose, would involve enough currency depreciation to lift farm commodity prices.

Farm products have risen about 100 per cent from the depression low prices without the aid of silver. Farmers are looking to general prosperity and Government bonuses to maintain them. Regardless of what price the Treasury pays domestic silver producers, holders of foreign silver and of shares in companies that produce silver outside this country plainly are worried. What the price might be without Treasury support is a question. It may be assumed that as a commodity it would rise as high above its depression low as have other commodities. That might put it somewhere around 40 cents an ounce. Such a prospect was partly responsible for further considerable selling of mining shares from abroad.

Against the Stream.

Along with the silver shares, the copper and nickel stocks also suffered. London was reported a heavy seller of International Nickel, largely a sympathetic operation as the company hasn't much silver. Posting of a silver price at a drop of 1 cent an ounce insured further pressure on the silver issues, but no stampede took place. In the early trading the silvers perked up 1 to 3 points, but they had to give it up. Coppers lost a point or so. Tobaccos continued under pressure, losing 1 to 2 points.

Oils as a group and a number of miscellaneous stocks moved against the current. The Standard group of oils was active. Seaboard rose more than a point. Pure Oils was active at new highs. Tidewater Associated reached the best of the year on the first sale, involving 10,000 shares. Sugars were firmer. Chicago Pneumatic Tool and Cutler-Hammer rose a point. Coca-Cola recovered 2 points. Philip Morris reached a new high, as did Crucible. Detroit Edison was strong, as were the fertilizer shares. Cleveland Graphite. Cluett-Peabody, International Railways, Kayser, National Supply preferred and Oliver Farm Equipment were other forward movers.

Few have noticed it, perhaps, but no fighting along the Abysinian front has taken place for about two weeks, and the peace negotiations have done much to improve the standing of foreign currencies. Francs continued their rise. Far-Eastern rates naturally were unsettled with silver.

This week's statement of the Bank of France shows a sharp reduction in the rate of the gold efflux, although 286,000,000 francs were lost. Circulation decreased hugely, leaving the ratio of gold to note circulation higher than last week. Meanwhile the outflow of gold from Paris has stopped and the road to the end of the year looks smoother. Bank of England continues to buy gold in moderate amounts, which may be a preparation for credit expansion with rising business in Great Britain.

General Motors.

General Motors stockholders received their regular and extra dividend checks today along with a word of explanation of how the new installment buying and insurance plans work. The new time payment plan will, the president thinks, increase both the sales and the good will of the corporation.

Railroad Earnings.

The first railroad report for November is a little late in appearing. The Alton Railroad usually leads off, about the ninth or tenth of each month. Freight carloadings last month ran nearly 12 per cent ahead of the same month of last year, and the experience of September and October suggests another good increase in earnings will be shown. The roads now are in condition to make the most of any rise in gross earnings. Last month they translated into net operating income approximately 54 per cent of their increase of gross revenues.

Petition Filed By Cotton Belt To Reorganize

Railroad's Action Forced by Cash Position and Short-Term Loans.

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Dec. 12.—Federal Judge Charles B. Davis today approved the petition in voluntary bankruptcy under Section 77 of the amended Federal bankruptcy law, whereby the Cotton Belt Railroad petitioned for reorganization.

He issued an order continuing the company in possession of its property and setting December 23 for a hearing on the appointment of one or more trustees to operate the road.

Judge Davis also issued injunctions restraining the RFC, the Railroad Credit Corporation, the Chase National Bank and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. from disposing, by sale or conversion, of $34,908,675 in collateral posted to secure loans, and restraining, in addition, Mississippi Valley from impounding as an offset on its loan any of the road's money on deposit.

Formally known as the St. Louis Southwestern, the Cotton Belt, so called because of the territory it traverses, declared itself unable to meet $24,958,992 in matured and maturing obligations.

Its petition, filed in Federal District Court under Section 77 of the amended Federal bankruptcy act, besought the court to "take jurisdiction over its property and affairs" and to take charge of the business incidental to its financial reorganization.

Cash Position Weak.

In New York, directors of the road, which is controlled by the Southern Pacific Co., issued a formal statement in which they said the company's cash position and the failure of the road to arrange extensions of short-term indebtedness led to authorization to file the bankruptcy petition.

The line, covering 1,786 miles, extends from St. Louis to Fort Worth and Hamilton, Tex., Shreveport, La., Little Rock, Ark., Memphis, Tenn., and Cairo, Ill. Southern Pacific obtained control of the Cotton Belt in April, 1932, and now holds 87 per cent of the Cotton Belt's preferred and common stock.

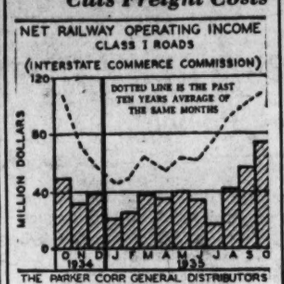
Railway Efficiency Cuts Freight Costs



Boston, Mass., Dec. 12.—Railroad operating efficiency has increased decidedly in the past 15 years and much of the gain from increased efficiency has been passed over to the shippers. The average freight revenue for a ton-mile in 1921 was 1.275 cents, while today the average revenue is less than 1 cent a ton-mile.

Scarcity of Wheat Advances Price

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—Acute scarcity of offerings hoisted December wheat contracts almost 2 cents a bushel here today. It became evident that Chicago December deliveries of wheat had passed into strong hands. Traders who were short of wheat to even up December accounts made haste to extricate themselves, and could only do so by submission to a rapid advance of prices.

Wheat closed irregular, varying from 1½ cents net advance to ⅝ decline, the latter for July, a new crop month. May wheat finished at 95⅝@95½, corn unchanged to ⅜ off, May 59¼@59⅜, oats unchanged to 1⅛ up, and provisions 10 to 22 cents down.

Fleming Asks End of Banking By Government

Commercial Banks Must Aid Withdrawal, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 12.—A suggestion that commercial banks must make possible the withdrawal of the Government from banking business was offered tonight by Robert V. Fleming, president of the American Bankers Association.

Addressing a forum dinner held in his honor by the New York chapter, American Institute of Banking, Fleming said that "many agencies established by the Government as emergency organizations are still functioning and will have to continue to function until we as bankers take over the facilities now offered by these agencies wherever we can soundly do so."

He added that the Government, in order to extend loans to the public at reasonable rates, finances itself through banks at the lowest rates of interest ever known in this country and "strikes right at the heart of bank earnings."

"Great changes in the practice of corporate institutions with respect to finance operations," Fleming said, "indicate that at present we can not depend upon strictly commercial loans as the main source of earnings for commercial banks."

Improved real estate loans and mortgages arranged under the national housing act were mentioned as particularly desirable types of loans for banks, and the assertion was made that with the broadened facilities of the Federal Reserve system and restored public confidence "there is no longer any need for banks to maintain such a high percentage of liquidity and bankers can adopt a broader, long-range viewpoint in dealing with their customers."

Continental Can Sees Taxes at $1 Per Share

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—Continental Can Co., Inc., in a communication to stockholders, asserted today that $1 a share will be required to cover its tax bill for 1935, using the result of last year as a basis.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Our Hero — By Harry J. Tuthill

By jove, I don't understand. Those two fellows saying Monty sent them to take you to the yacht.
In that second car that followed us...I saw him.. one of the men who tried to get the pocketbook when I found it.
Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. 12-13
And one of the red-hots who drove us just now asked about the pocketbook before we left home, Hartford.
Such speed! I'm still nervous.
I knew something was wrong when I noticed we were not going toward the water.
As I drove up to your house, I saw you leaving. I started after you. Then the second car cut in ahead of me. Well...
They had cannons, Hartford. Cannons.
Yes, we heard shots. Oh I'm so glad you didn't catch up to them.
Oh yes, guns are a bit dangerous, but then it wouldn't be the first time I've run into...well anyhow, I must get you to the yacht.
Well Mr. Oakdale, we thank you for....
Saving our lives. Yes suh! Good old Hartford to the rescue!

$100,000 Libel Suit Names 5 Lawyers

Note Holders' Committee Accused Over Letters.

Five prominent Washington attorneys were named in a $100,000 libel suit filed in District Supreme Court yesterday by Howe Totten, attorney and real estate operator.

The defendants—Ralph P. Barnard, Paul Sleman, Charles E. Quigley, C. F. R. Ogilby and B. Woodruff Weaver—comprised the protective committee for holders of first trust notes on the Oaklawn Terrace Apartments, 3620 Sixteenth street northwest.

Totten charged he was libeled in letters mailed to 275 noteholders commenting upon his invitation to them to attend a meeting for consideration of renewal of their notes. Totten is owner of the apartment. He charged the protective committee with mailing the letters.

Old Gold Mine Area Is Scene Of Sandy Hike

Wanderbirds to Follow the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Route.

By Robert Shosteck.

Sunday's Wanderbird hike along the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal and Watts Branch traverses a region famous for many ill-fated gold mining operations. Starting from the Ford mine near Great Falls, one passes numerous prospectors' pits, particularly along the beautiful Watts Branch between New Cut road and the old Glen Mill. Tenderfoot hikers are particularly invited to go on this 10-mile walk, since the trails are open and easy under foot all the way. Those unacquainted with Great Falls will have at opportunity to visit the cataract at the end of the hike.

Readers and members of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club planning to go on this trip must phone in reservations (NA. 4200) by midnight Saturday. The round trip fare will be 50 cents and the group leaves The Post Building promptly at 10 a. m. Bring lunch and a cup for coffee, and an extra 10 cents if you plan to cross the toll bridge to the falls.

Starting from the tavern at the end of Conduit road, the group will follow the towpath along the canal for 2 miles to the Oak Spring Lock. The half-mile dam across the river at Conn Island is visible from the trail, and along the canal, near the lock, one may see the squat stone canal-tender's house, over 100 years old.

The route follows Lock road to River road, and thence a short way cross-country to Watts Branch. Beyond the bridge at New Cut road is a propector's pit, and not far off is a spring. We follow a woods trail along the branch until we reach Glen Mill. The present owner of this old mill knows little of its history, but states that it ceased operating about a decade ago when the mill race was damaged by ice.

He hopes to repair the break and resume milling in 1936. The scenery along Watts Branch is particularly impressive in this vicinity. Huge boulders scattered in the bed of the stream make it a succession of rapids and small farmhouses and strips of pasture nestled in its narrow valley create an idyllic scene.

The next 3 miles of the route are along country roads which lead back to the canal, this time to the trail on the left bank. A short walk brings us to the Ford Gold Mine, which the Wanderbirds visited on October 20. After inspecting the old pits and bunk house, the group will follow the woods road to Great Falls. Buses will leave immediately for those wishing to return to the city early, while others who wish to visit the falls will have about a half hour to do so.

Labor Increases Share Of Sheet Steel Dollar

New York, Dec. 12.—Labor's share of each dollar received by the steel industry from the sale of sheet steel was 17 per cent greater in 1934 than it was in 1929, according to calculations by the American Iron and Steel Institute from data furnished by one prominent and typical manufacturer.

In 1934, payrolls took 38.2 cents out of each dollar of sheet sales compared with 32.6 cents in 1929. Over the 12 years, 1923-1934, payrolls averaged approximately 36.6 cents out of each sheet steel dollar.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS. —Advt.
